POLICE COURT.

Too Carleton Peace Disturbers Remanded—A Sailor's Troubles.

The colored element predominated both on the mercy seat and among the spectators today. The youth and beauty turned out to witness the trial of their three friends for disorderly conduct on the public streets on the west side, and with violently resisting the police. One of the gentlemen had been brought in this morning by Sergeant Ross and joined his comrades in the court room. There were only three names on the sheet, but four men on the bench, and the roll had to be called, and each name assigned to its own. Edridge Batman showed fight when arrested, and caused a great deal of trouble. It was found that his wrists were too big for the handcuffs and even for the twist, so he had to be taken with his arms free. Besides painting the city a bright vermilion in a metaphorical sense some days ago, Batman endeavored to do it literally last evening by spilling a can of red paint on himself and the police officer. The officer, however, states that Batman never since, have been color blind for the paint was blue. They all pleaded not guilty this morning, and were remanded until tomorrow.

Albert Patton, a sailor off the Prince Rupert, amused himself by shouting and raising a disturbance on British street last night. He was in company with several others, who all ran on the approach of the officer. Patton continued his devious course down the street until he came to James Miller's at the corner of German street, into which place he endeavored to force his way. He made use of some very impolite language, but, as he was drunk at the time, that charge was not pressed, and he was fined for drunkenness four dollars or ten days.

Walter Morrison, who was one of the participants in the Conboy fight on Sheffield street last Saturday night, and has managed to evade the police ever since, gave himself up this forenoon. He is suffering from a badly injured head.

Another prisoner was brought in this morning, but was too drunk to know his own name. He is at present lying in a cell and will come up tomorrow. It now appears that the man who was arrested this morning is Daniel McCormack. He was begging from door to door, and made himself thoroughly disagreeable to the residents of Chelmsford Hill. When arrested he was holding in his hand a twenty-five cent piece, which had probably been given by some person who was anxious to get clear of him.

GET ANOTHER HORSE.

To the Editor of the Star.
Sir,—Would you kindly allow me space to ask how much longer is that brutal treatment to be meted out to the poor dumb beasts now forced to haul the new ladder truck? Two veterinarians, and also all persons who have witnessed a lashing inflicted on the animals, know only too well that they are being both abused and ruined.

If the S. P. C. A. is still in existence why does it not take the matter in hand from its present position as I, for one, fail to see why a city should be any more at liberty to overload or abuse a dumb brute than an individual. After a few more forced hauls the animals will be dead, and then the citizens who have been most unwilling observers of the foolishness and cruelty, will have to pay for either three or four new horses—another sample of civic mismanagement.

During the time these abuses are going on, there is the possibility that while a fire is getting a nice start and making good headway, on one of our streets will be witnessed the sight of a crowd of men vainly endeavoring to force forward a ladder truck, which a pair of horses, once as good as ever, tightened a trace (having had their hearts broken) refuse to pull a pound, and devote all their energies to the balking-horse trick of backing.

The following inspectors were appointed for the spring tour of the city: J. B. McParlane, Calvin Powers, H. J. McElroy, W. Davis, W. Dunham. They will go out on the 11th, and have been instructed to embody in their report the number of persons in the city not vaccinated.

The matter of the duty of the quarantine officer was discussed. No definite arrangement has as yet been made, but the matter will be taken up further.

OBJECTIONS DISMISSED.

By Chief Justice Tuck in the York Election Petition.

Chief Justice Tuck in chambers today, in the matter of the York County election petition, upheld the decision of the court and dismissed the preliminary objections as to Judge Gregory's right to extend the time for service on Mr. Gibson, and to allow substitute service on application made after the time for service had expired, and on insufficient grounds. As no appeal could be made to the Supreme Court of Canada from the Supreme Court of New Brunswick, the application was made. Chief Justice Tuck decided that the costs of the application go to the successful party on appeal, reserving the right to award the costs to the petitioner if the appeal should not be prosecuted. New objections to the effect that Dr. McLeod had, by himself and others for him, been guilty of corrupt practices at the election were abandoned, the court having intimated that they would not be received. O. S. Crockett appeared for Dr. McLeod, the petitioner, and A. J. Gregory for Alex. Gibson, Jr., the respondent.
