GERMAN PRESS IGNORES FACTS AT THIS TIME

For instance, Crossing the Marne Heralded As Greatest Event When Germans Expected It, Has Now Apparently Become Most Insignificant of Affairs.

By George F. Steward.

(Special Cable to The N. Y. Tribune and The St. John Standard.)

London, Aug. 5.—The German press is still busy with a splendid disregard of facts, and even their own previous utterances attempting to explain away both the cause and effect of the recent defeat. For instance, crossing the Marne which was heralded as the greatest event when the Germans expected it, has now apparently become of the most insignificant of affairs, for Salzman naively tells readers of the "Vossische Zeitung" that after all the Marne is "Nothing but a lot of water running between wood and unwooded banks and through marshes." "It means nothing," he adds as far as military victory is concerned, and not in any geographical description. "Wherever victories were obtained he is completely indifferent, whether on the Marne, Oise, Scarpe or Yser." But he might have added that a victory on the Marne would have been the dearest to Ludendorff.

The Tages Zeitung.
The military expert of the Tages Zeitung also unwittingly adds to the rumor of military critics by declaring that the German troops were withdrawn to shorten the curve and "this measure was taken after the general attack by Foch on the whole front miscarried the lack of success of the enemy offensive."
If the German command withdraws troops from the northern bank of the Marne it is merely because he wants to improve the strategic position as a whole. "The German successes at the Marne troops did not withdraw from a decision in leaving the Marne. Territorial gains are not the object of the war." Other writers leave this general theme in order to eulogize the work of the German flyers. Stepmeyer in the Hamburger Fremdenblatt attributes the intimate knowledge of German plans to those taking talk behind the front and the work of traitors who dis-perded and informed the enemy of the plans. "They forget," says the writer that by their miserable conduct they have inflicted serious harm on their own comrades. When these people are exchanged they will be severely punished." Persius' Review.

Persius in reviewing the naval activity of the fifth year of the war in the Tageblatt explains while it was formerly regarded as the task of the navy not to destroy the enemy's commerce but to prevent the enemy from carrying out his plan of attacking the coastline of the navy the sequence has been reversed. He quotes, however, that only fantastic persons imagined that the submarine would defeat England by reducing the population to starvation and thereby end the war. The carrying on of the U-boat warfare is becoming increasingly difficult and nobody will creatively think that anybody will continue, "the activity of the submarines which last year sunk eight million tons, and has assisted in weakening the allied warfare, but seriously threatens the losses of commercial tonnage is felt especially by England for it's work after the war, there is not the slightest indication, however, of the further continuation of the war has been decreased."
"Consequently the U-boats in the first year of war have a wide field of activity for it is clear that the longer the submarine war continues, the more difficult it will be to wage it, because apart from the improved methods of defense the shipping activities of our enemies and neutrals must naturally greatly increase. Standing in the beginning of the fifth year of the war, we express the hope that it may bring an honorable conclusion of fighting which secures the possibility of existence to our nation."
