LAME MARE.

Mare got very lame in the forefeet about five or six months ago. Her feet have checked in the soles and have got very dry. Would it be advisable to make a pair of boots for her and poultice with linseed oil?

J. W. S.

Ans.—Your mare is evidently suffering from chronic laminitis founder. Soften the hoofs by poulticing for two or three days with poultices composed of equal parts of linseed meal and bran. When the hoofs are sufficiently softened, have all the waste horn pared from the soles. After this, proper shoeing, with the addition of a heavy leather sole and a stopping of tar and oakum, will give, at least, temporary relief.

ACUTE RHEUMATISM.

A young cow three years old, in good condition, seemed to get stiff in legs and in from eighteen to thirty-six hours lost power altogether of her limbs, went down and we could not raise her. She would drink water or mash, eat hay or green oat feed while lying and up until a short time before she died. Lived almost four days from time sickness was noticed first. A neighbor has lost two cows with apparently the same trouble. We had the cow opened and could see nothing wrong whatever, or any indications of disease.

Alta. SUBSCRIBER.

The symptoms you have mentioned indicate a very acute attack of rheumatism, which proved fatal in so short a time by involving the heart. There are two statements in your description of the case which appear to be somewhat at variance. After a certain length of time you state, that the cow "lost power altogether of her limbs, went down and we could not raise her." You however, further state that "she would drink water or mash, eat hay or green oat feed, while lying and up until a short time before she died." Now was the cow able to rise before she died? The treatment would consist of putting the animal in a warm dry place with plenty of bedding, and administering internally, three times daily in a quart of gruel:—Salicylate of soda 4 drams; fluid extract of nux vomica 1½ drams; nitrate of potash, 2 drams. The limbs well rubbed three times a day with the following liniment:—Raw linseed oil, 8 ounces; turpentine and strong liquor ammonia, of each 4 ounces. Mix and shake well when using.

LAME SOW.

Brood sow had seven pigs December 1st; suckling them for five weeks got very stiff and got down so as she could not rise, and is in pain if compelled to do so. Was fed on barley and wheat chop and slops; was on a board floor; the place was quite warm. Give cause and cure if any.

Man. ABERDEEN.

Ans.—Your sow is suffering from rheumatism. Give five or six ounces of castor oil, or sufficient to operate smartly on her bowels. After which give morning, noon and night in sloppy food:—Salicylate of soda, one-half dram. Rub the legs twice daily with the following liniment:—Soap liniment, 6 ounces; fluid extract of aconite and fluid extract of belladonna, of each 1 ounce. Feed oat chop and bran instead of barley and wheat chop.

MUSCULAR WEAKNESS.

Can you tell me what is the cause of a horse standing with his hind legs propped out behind him when he stands in the stable? He seems to want to stretch back. Seems to be all right when standing up in the stable. When worked seems to get worse. Horse feeds well and keeps in good order. Would this be because of weak kidneys?

Man. SUBSCRIBER.

Ans.—The position which your horse assumes when standing in the stable indicates a weakened condition of the muscles of the loins, and, if the animal be aged, there is no remedy for it. It, however, appears to be simply a habit in some horses to maintain that peculiar position of the hind limbs when standing in the stable.
