THE OLD YEAR.
He lieth still; he doth not move
He will not see the dawn of day.
He hath no other life above;
He gave me a friend, and a true, true
love,
And the New Year will take him
away,
Old year you must not go;
So long as you have been with us,
Such joy as you have seen with us,
Old Year, you must not go.

He was full of joke and jest,
But all his merry quips are o'er,
To see him die, across the waste,
His son and heir doth ride post haste,
But he'll be dead before.

Every one for his own,
The night is stary and cold, my
friend,
And the New Year blithe and bold,
My friend,
Comes up to take his own.

'Tis nearly twelve o'clock,
Shake hands before you die,
Old Year, we'll dearly rue for you;
What is it we can do for you?
Speak out before you die.

There's a new foot on the floor, my
friend,
And a new face at the door, my
friend,
A new face at the door.
——Tennyson.

A Governor-General's Recipe for Boiling Ham.

The following recipe for boiling ham was found in Gen. Haldimand's private diary. A few of the entries found there may add a spice to the ham. "Thursday, 8th was at Court, where I was very late. It is said that when their Majesties arrived scarcely anyone was in the room. The Queen asked me at what time I arrived. I answered that I had been more than an hour and a half on the road, and that at last I had been obliged to leave my carriage in the middle of St. James' street, and take a sedan chair. The court was crowded, and it seemed to me that I had never seen so many beautiful women there. Last evening I took brandy tea with hocky and lemon juice, but cold it no better. Joseph Brant breakfasted at my house. Claus Butler tells me that Joseph proposes to go to Paris before returning to America. 27th—Dined at Lady Hoeders'. Lost two rubbers at whist. Was at a levee in the Prince of Wales. Played at quadrille with Lady Dora. How to cook a ham. Let it soak for thirty-six hours in tepid water; then let it hang for same length of time in the larder, and cook afterwards with a slow fire; no more water than will cover it; add dripping taking care that the pot will be covered. The ham is better cooked by steam."

Santa's Military Party.

Santa Claus, dressed in his Christmas garb, was the charming host of a huge tree party at the armories last evening. Santa was in fine form for he is always in the best of spirits. He marshalled the children's party. He marshalled the Dufferin Rifles as his fencible men, and called their wives as well, into his service. And what a fairyland party was to the fore. The tree luminous with red, green and white, electric bulbs, sprays with silver nozzles, and gay with the colors of the regiment, and laden with toys and candy bags, made a scene as in the Arabian Nights. And Santa was here, there and everywhere, bubbling over with good will and merriment. The officers' wives presented the presents. The music, fun and frolic words cannot tell. But the happy children of the whole regiment in mass, told the story that we fail to do in words.

Laid of Rest

The Late Jerry Springstead. All that was mortal of the late Jerry Springstead was laid to rest in Mount Hope cemetery yesterday. The funeral was well attended by many sorrowing friends and relatives. The services at the house and the grave were appropriately conducted by Rev. Mr. Loney of the Emmanuel Baptist church and were very impressive. The funeral was in charge of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, of whom the late Mr. Springstead was a member. Local 443 of the Brotherhood turned out in a body to pay their last respects to the departed brother. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, testifying to the esteem in which the late Mr. Springstead was held.

They included a large wreath from wife and family; pillow from father and mother; wreath from Electrical Workers; sprays, Mr. Masters and family, Will and Bert Doherty.

Mr. H. Burton, the head of the Electrical Union, acted very generously and thoughtfully towards the bereaved.

Andrew Hutchison.

The funeral of the late Andrew F. Hutchison, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Hutchison, 11 Blossie St., took place Wednesday afternoon at Mount Hope Cemetery. Rev. D. T. McIntosh conducted the services. The following is a list of the flowers received, which were very beautiful: Wreath, Cockshutt maleable and cool room; sprays, Alexandra Cradle Roll, Alexandra Ladies' Aid and Brotherhood, Mr. and Mrs. A. Fotheringham, Mr. and Mrs. J. Fotheringham, Mr. and Mrs. R. Robb and Mrs. J. Hutchison.

Lady Bertha Dawkins.
During the past few years there has come to the front at court a woman, who, in many respects, is the most powerful, unofficial individual in England. Her name is hardly known, but she is the most influential woman in the street, while little or nothing is known of her personality. Yet by her influence over Queen Mary and through King George's Consort, upon the fashions, the social usages and the ceremonial part of the life at the Court of St. James' her power is enormous.

This woman who prefers to pull the wires in the background, is Lady Bertha Dawkins, a widow. Before her marriage she was Lady Bertha Wilbraham, daughter of the late Lord Latham. Officially she is only one of the ladies-in-waiting to the Queen, but in reality she is the favorite friend of Her Majesty. Lady Bertha Dawkins for the past eighteen months has been almost continuously at court and Her Majesty is coming more and more to leave the control of the royal visiting list in her hands, which is tantamount to investing her socially with an almost autocratic power. All who are pushing and struggling to be asked to meet royally at any house, party or society function have to secure the favor of Lady Bertha Dawkins, just as in days gone by great ladies, splended and schemed to get into the good graces of Miss Charlotte Knollys. During the season King George and Queen Mary dined on six occasions with various people, other than those of royal rank, and on each occasion among the list of guests chosen by Queen Mary to sit at the Royal table there were always two or three special friends of Lady Bertha.

"The lure of the Latin quarter, in Paris at Christmastide, who can describe it? There is a city where sadness is a sin, whose habit it is to take life laughingly. There in the cafes poets and painters dream and brood as Stevenson, poor and ill, dreamed as men have, ever since the quarter came to be. Sit and study the types of man from Mars! Just try to think that you are a visitor from Mars and this is a show gotten up for you. See in that circle of the unknown is the girl from home, in her fingers a flaming cigarette, at her elbow a brimming book. Oh if Pa and Ma back in Cornerville could see her now! Studying art in Paris! What a multitude of indirections it covers! Studentdom is let loose in the sad, glad, mad, real Paris. A spettacolo savant, a scandalous student of the Beaux arts, a down abbe, shythe Babette, an overfed Knight of the Legion, Gigolette of the gutter, and so on, types without end. What a slice of life it is! Verily the Latin Quarter makes artists of everyone—and yet they tell us the glory of the quarter is passing away."

Saturday Night.
The last Saturday evening of the year flashes its lights and shadows on the crowds that come and go on Colborne and other streets. The faces are a study; so many shadow friends one is interested in but can never know in the quick march through life. The sidewalk brightness is in full force. Many rollers can heave a sigh of relief. To-morrow will be Sunday and rest. How little people of leisure know the joy of rest after a hard day's work and duty well done. The people hurry along. The old, the young, the sad, the gay marching along the King's highway. The financier with the keen face, the student with the academic face, full of hope and joy at what life holds for him. The foreign accents, the foreign faces, doing their best in the struggle to make their way. Many sad, thoughtful and spiritual longings in the hearts of unnumbered hundreds of men and women in whom we should never suspect it. Among the wise and thoughtful, and among the young who seldom as- surage and never betray their thirteenth year, this is one of the most wonderful and touching facts of life. Some one has said life is like a railway journey. Some never reach the first station. Many must get off at the middle station, and a few are left at the last station. And so milestones pass every with the year, and one is nearer and nearer another year that will bring each man his sorrow. As one returns home, embers in the grate are low, an occasional sputtle gleam bursts forth, waning like the dying year. That beautiful little new book "The Mosaic" is lying on the table. It says:

May the New Year be the Happiest and Best is Our Wish for All Our Customers and Friends.
