

DAYLIGHT SAVING NEXT YEAR.

In parliament on Wednesday last, Sir George Foster, in reply to Mr. Bolvin, who asked if the government intended to put the daylight saving into effect this year, stated that part of the season had passed. In the United States a similar bill had been adopted which would go into effect next year, and probably the view here would be that Canada should take action jointly with the United States.

New York Maritime Register: While the United States coastwise laws have not been suspended, arrangements have been made under which Canadian vessels may trade between American ports. This is a war measure. The plan, which will increase lake vessels capacity on the American side, probably will be in operation the rest of the season. It is figured 12 or 13 Canadian vessels can be placed in American coastwise trade part of the season, but boats of that class have some contracts and will carry grain as soon as the fall movement starts at the Canadian end of the lakes.

Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Watkins, Church St., whose three sons have been nobly doing their duty at the front, have lately received word from their youngest boy Godfrey. He was wounded April 9th and will likely be discharged and returned to Nova Scotia as soon as he is able to be brought here. He was dangerously wounded by being shot in the thigh, had his arm smashed with two bullets and this was followed by blood poisoning. It will only be with most skillful treatment that he will ever be able to use his arm again. This family is an example what one family in Nova Scotia is doing. Mr. Watkins consents to his three sons enlisting while he remains home with a very large farm and unable to find help to work it satisfactorily. It would be a patriotic work for some of our clerks business or professional men who need a vacation to help Mr. Watkins on the farm instead of taking to the woods or seashore.

'ESPRIT DE CORPS'

It is agreed upon by most military authorities that the wonderful success of the various Napoleonic campaigns lay not so much in the brilliant leadership of Napoleon as in the great unity of spirit of the action which he, Napoleon, so aptly named the "Esprit de Corps."

No organization, be it military, social or commercial, can ever hope to attain the purpose for which it was conceived unless there exists to some extent a preconceived and definite object to which it aspires as an ultimate goal. Therefore, in the last analysis, the term "Esprit de Corps" reserves itself fact in mind, it is quite easy to understand how it is possible to gather together from all quarters of this continent a company of men—who heretofore have lived each after his own inclination or desire—and putting them into the great melting pot, "Organization," fuse them into one individual unit, thus making a harmonious blend of Action, Thought and Spirit.

A veritable example of this may be seen in the unit of the British Expeditionary Forces now stationed at Aldershot Camp, N. S. Here we find men from all walks of life—lawyers, doctors, civil engineers, mechanics, actors, musicians, ministers of the Gospel, the factory employee, the humble laborer, etc. These men, feeling that the time had come for them to renounce all selfish aims, left the commercial pursuits in which they had in many instances been engaged for years, and taking up arms in the cause of human liberty, they are preparing to carry on the fight which they who have gone before so nobly, begun.

And now we come to a different expression of the Spirit of the Corps: There is an old adage that runs thus: "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," and by changing the word "Jack" to "Tommy," the saying applies with particular force to the boys of the B. E. F.—We must have amusement, and in keeping with the community idea of something for everyone, by everyone we get the Concert idea.

This brings us to the central theme: A potent case of "Esprit de Corps" was discovered in the B. E. F. Unit. It was decided to employ this "Spirit" in a play. Perpend—A Concert Superior will be presented by the boys of the B. E. F. at the Pastime Theatre on July 26, 1917. This concert will be under the patronage of the Camp Commandant and Staff. There are 18 original acts on the programme, ranging all the way from Grand Opera to a Boxing Exhibition; and including Comic Songs, Monologues, Violin Solos, a Song Revue by a quartette of voices that it would be well nigh impossible to assemble under any other circumstances. There is also a screaming Farce Comedy Playlet, entitled, "Where Baby are You?" this act is guaranteed to cure the worst case of grouch ever contracted, and to send you home patting yourself on the back; in fact, you will kick the dishes off the table the next morning thinking how funny it was. There are many more acts, each as good as the other, and anyone of which is well worth the price of admission.

If you want to be amused, or if you are interested in the "Esprit de Corps" and desire to see how this spirit manifests itself, go to the Pastime Theatre on Thursday evening. And, should you enter into the spirit of the occasion and put yourself in harmony with the surrounding atmosphere, the benefit derived from the evening's entertainment would be immeasurable to you—not to mention the fact that you would become a part of the great "Esprit de Corps."
