At Parting.
The night is silent, low, and here beside thee, Holding the hand that to me now doth cling, I too am still: how shall I say farewell?
No words have we, and yet the summer weather, Lolling the garden, gathers us together, And sings to us with words and smiles.
Was there a time before that time, I wonder, When something flashed and rent the wall around And vision faded, and the Truth I felt?
And now, because thou art the Truth, I'll give Thee
No longer withholding to believe thee, Though I fast sent upon a sorrow-wind.
How long the way thou sayest out, but only That I must tread it lonely and alone, Unabating with its straight, and don't Wish this must be I cannot know.
Step by step, the secret thou sayest, Nothing I ask—how may the Truth be known?
I have thee, yet by thee I'm still surrounded.
The sea's voice sounds about the farthest shore.
The moonlight deepens, love, and grows to gold.
And thou and I in it are strangely hidden—Ah, holy, holy moment of farewell!
—George Herbert Clarke, in the September Canadian Magazine.

Granny Grimthorpe.
By Mrs. Conyssa Carr.
She is eighty years old.
Her aged face is lined and furrowed into manifold ridges and creases, like the ridges and clefs seaming the mountains that surround her humble home. Her little gray eyes are lost in them, all, and her toothless mouth is but a slight indentation on a great rugged surface of ancient rock.
Not beautiful, but she is like a wonderful grotesque by an Old Master. Every wrinkle has a meaning, and they are all words in a long, wonderful tale of a long, patient life, which they, and they only, will ever tell.
She loves flowers. Her garden is the sight and pride of the village. It stands hard on the highroad, shaded by a tree nor a shrub between that and the low stone cottage in its small midst; and every wayfarer sees, and does, stop to note it and to praise.
A delicate scarlet troseolus, anemone in southern English gardens, covers the gray walls of the house, and a handsome lilac clematis twines luxuriantly about its hooded porch.
A blaze of red begonia and gladiolus tries to rival the hollyhock and sunflower into the shade beneath her window, while the choicer sorts of salicaria, petunias, geraniums, and fuchsias fill the tiny border around her tiny lawn, and a rare lily blooms in a pot at her threshold.
"Mind ye'll spoil the flowers," were the first words she said to me, and she said that about a week ago.
I had come, begging to be admitted into this dainty sanctuary, but I've little believe that my unlucky case, resting against a bank of tall thyme beside her gate, nearly lost me my chance.
I never forgot that first reproof; I wanted to forget it; the love of the rough, sun-dried creature for these tender blossoms was a thing to abide in the memory and to constrain respect.
I can see her yet—her tall, tough old body bent double over a drooping plant with a gentleness such as one could not easily fancy her bestowing upon any human creature; her old chin with which she powdered her minute with the weight of her ministra-ture lawn; her old hand, shaking as she sprinkled her flowers at even.
And immediately, unavoidably, I fell under the spell of that humble body. While paying as a lodger I became a slave—the slave of the darlings to whom my hostess sacrificed her every comfort. I should say my every comfort but one; for when I had helped her with the watering, and her suspicious old heart had almost melted to kindness beneath the slow, creeping northern gloaming, I would sometimes manage to enter her into the tiny parlor which I had rented of her, and there she would furtively draw from her pocket as the evening lengthened a blackened old clay pipe, beneath whose soothing influence her tongue would at times even unlose

Mr. Alex. Eshley, Jr., Clarence Creek, Bristol Co., Ont., writes: "My nervous system was run down to such an extent that I suffered a great deal from weakness of the system, sciatic rheumatism, and at times was unable to sleep. I could not work, was unable to sleep, and had no appetite."
"Nothing seemed to build up my

It May Be Pneumonia
"A hard chill, pain through the chest, difficult breathing.
Then fever, with great prostration." If this should be your experience, I send for your doctor. You may have pneumonia! If your doctor cannot come at once, give Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. When he comes, tell him exactly what you have done. Then do as he says.
No alcohol in this cough medicine. TCR & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Keep the bowels in good condition. One of Ayer's Pills at bedtime will cause an increased flow of bile, and produce a gentle laxative effect the day following.

Baby's Terrible Eczema.
Hands Tied to Prevent Scratching.
Five Doctors Failed to Relieve, but Zam-Buk Worked a Cure.
Mrs. Chas. Levere, of Prescott, North Channel, Ont., tells how Zam-Buk cured her baby. She says:—
"My baby's head and face was one complete mass of sores. The itching and irritation were so serious that at one time we feared her ears would be eaten off with the disease.
We had to keep her hands tied for days to prevent her scratching and scratching the sores. Doctor after doctor treated her in vain until we had had five doctors. They all agreed it was a frightful case of eczema, but none of them did any permanent good.
As a last resource we were advised to try Zam-Buk. The first box did so much good that we felt sure we were at last working in the right direction. We persevered with the treatment until we had used thirteen boxes, and at the end of that time, I am glad to say Zam-Buk had effected a complete cure."
Mrs. Holmes, of 30 Guise street, Hamilton, is quite as eloquent in her praise. She says:—"Zam-Buk cured my boy of boils and eruptions when he was so bad that he has been unable to mix with other children. Zam-Buk is a wonderful preparation, and mothers throughout the land should always keep it handy." For eczema, eruptions, rashes, tetter, itch, ringworm, and similar skin diseases, Zam-Buk is without equal.
It also cures cuts, burns, scalds, piles, abscesses, chronic sores, blood poisoning. All druggists and stores at 50 cents a box, or post free for price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Refuse imitations.

time they lived at Selby before the old man died. But never a thought for her eternal soul. And a rare, masterful maid that needed the contrite spirit.
"A light broke in upon me.
"And she is dead?" I asked.
"Maybe! But past everything for long ago, anyway. She took up with a playacting chap that came to the town, and nothing would serve but she must wed him. The old folks never forgave her. Old Benjamin was a hard man, I'll allow. He forbade the old wife to read so much as a letter from her, and when the child was born—"
"There was a child?" I asked, remembering the photograph on the chimney-piece.
"Aye, a little lass, I've heard. But 'tis said old Grimthorpe would not even look at its picture, poor mite, and 'twas a sprig of evil. He was as rare, masterful man himself, and his darter took after him. He died soon after she ran away, and when her son was wed granny came here to get her living with lettin'. She did ought to need it, but she is a proud body, and she was better pleased to be where some knew the child that she held had disgraced her."
"He put his pipe back into his mouth, puffing fiercely as though half ashamed of his conduct, then with a curse and he left me." I stood a moment, wondering, remembering, and understanding slowly.
Then I hastened homeward. I no longer blushed for my landlady. I blushed for myself.
The wicket gate was barred when I reached it, and I was conscious of a passing but genuine fear lest I should have so fallen into disgrace as to be locked out for the night. But it occurred to me that there was a back way to the cottage, and I betook myself to a gap which I had noticed in the hedge opposite the cow-house. I crept through it. I saw that there was a feeble light burning in the barn, and, as I was lighting at the cause, I saw a tall, bent figure stumble along the uneven ground by the wall with something in its hand. I looked and sure enough it was Granny Grimthorpe. I looked again, and even in the darkness that had now descended I made out the 'something' to be a steaming bowl.
"Can be depended upon" is an expression we all like to hear, and when it is used in connection with Chamberlain's Cough, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy it means that it never fails to cure diarrhoea, dysentery or bowel complaints. It is pleasant to take and equally valuable for children and adults. Sold by Rand's Drug Store. Samples free.

The Man to Be Watched.
Always suspect a man who affects great softness of manner, an untrifling evenness of temper, an unexcited studied, slow and deliberate. These things are all unnatural, and bespeak a degree of mental discipline into which he has no purpose of craft of design to answer, cannot submit to drill himself. The most successful knaves are usually of this description, as smooth as razors dipped in oil, and as sharp. They affect the innocence of the dove, which they have not, in order to hide the cunning of the serpent, which they have.
