Notes and Comments.

"Sir Edward is criticized for referring to the free entry of Newfoundland fish into the United States, and we are told that he had nothing to do with it. Directly, the assertion is justified." So says the Daily News this morning in answer to our comments of Saturday.

The Daily News, however, evades the real issue we raised. We pointed out that Sir Edward Morris, according to its own message, had referred to the free entry of our fish in the United States as an accomplished fact. We pointed out that the case was being misrepresented, and that Sir Edward Morris, according to the Daily News report, had stated that our fish was already entering the United States free of duty. This is not correct, our fish is not entering there free. Fish has not yet been placed on the Free List. The law has not yet been changed, and no change is expected until July next. This charge the Daily News completely ignores in its reply.

We pointed out that Sir Edward Morris, according to the Daily News report, declared that not only was our fish entering the United States entry had been to raise prices, and free, but that the effect of the free indeed he went further and gave price quotations with the object of buttressing up his avowals.

At Fogo, however, on Saturday, Sir Edward withdrew from the untenable position he had seized upon the night before at Seldom-Come-By, and spoke of "how to-day we were in sight of a free market for our fish in the great neighbouring Republic of the United States, with its one hundred million inhabitants."

We ask our readers to mark the contrast between the two reports:—

(Special to the Daily News.)
Seldom-Come-By, March 9.—He (Sir Edward Morris) showed the effect on the price of fish by the capturing of the American markets, and pointed out that already the free entry of our fish and herring into the United States is making itself felt. Herring that sold last year at $2.50, $2.50 and $3.00, now bring $3.50, $3.20 and $4.00."

Fogo, May 10th.—He (Sir Edward Morris) pointed out that as a fishing district the men were more interested in fish, probably, and the price of fish than any other district in the country, being purely a fishing district; he also showed how the policy of the Government had been to open up new markets without paying too high a price for the same, and how to-day we were in sight of a free market for our fish in the great neighbouring Republic of the United States, with its one hundred million inhabitants."

How could it come about if the United States market was already captured, if our fish was already entering there free, and if the effect had already been to enhance the price of fish, and if the enhanced price of herring had resulted as a consequence of those matters as accomplished facts when he was speaking at Seldom Come By on Friday, they were not accomplished facts when he was speaking at Fogo on Saturday, a day later. How did it come about that he related these matters as historic facts to one concourse of voters on Friday, and on Saturday told a different set of people they were not historic facts, but matters in the air, conditions of affairs which might come about later, prospects which were in sight.

With Sir Edward Morris so unreliable about matters which so intimately affect the welfare of the fishermen, what confidence can be placed in these campaign messages? We have seen a message which gives an account of the reception he met with at Fogo, very different from the one published in the Daily News. This account states that the demonstration was very poor, that few guns were fired, that the cheers given for him were weak, and that roaring cheers were given against him.

In view of the recklessness of the expenditure of the Morris Government, the payment of the contractors of the branch railways in gold instead of bonds, his serious miscalculations and misrepresentations of the cost of this railway building, it comes with poor grace from Sir Edward Morris that he should resurrect the horrors of Black Monday as a night-mare against a change of Government, particularly when his administration has hung round the neck of Terra Nova a millstone of Seven Million

Harnessing Tides At Hand.

British Expert Wonders Why It Has Been Delayed so Long.

London April 30.—C. A. Battiscombe is to read the meeting of the Institution of Electrical Engineers next week a paper in which he will assert that the harnessing of the tides is about to be realized at last. Mr. Battiscombe says:

"After a close study of the subject for years I am of the opinion that the use of the tides for power of all sorts may now be placed on a strictly commercial basis by the Board of Trade. An electrical unit may be obtained by this means at the cost of only about one-eighth of a penny (quarter of a cent), including everything, as compared with from three and a half pence to two-pence (7 to 4 cents) under the other power systems now in use."

"The tidal proposal is not so revolutionary after all. I wonder how many people realize the use to which this tidal power is put every day of the year in propelling ships, and, in the case of tidal basins, in raising vessels at enormous tonnage. The installation would not be complicated, and would follow the lines of three practical patents, taken out by Germans for combined reservoirs and supply chambers. The main difficulty to-day turns on the question of embankment walls—whether they can be built with sufficient economy to make such installations a practical success. The use of a ferro-concrete skin on the inner part, which is formed of cheaper materials, solves this difficulty, in my opinion."

S.S. Glace Bay Can Be Refloated.

Capt. Saunders, special officer for the Salvage Association of London, and who represents Lloyds Underwriters, who are interested in the British steamer Glace Bay, now stranded between Freshwater and Mistaken Point, has just returned from the vessel where he has made a complete examination of her position and condition. The result of the captain's examination is that he has advised his principals in London that if prompt and efficient measures are used the vessel can be saved and delivered in Dry Dock where she can be repaired and put in commission again.

Has Forgotten Husband

Injury Blots Out Woman's Memory — Thinks Herself a Girl.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 1.—Edward Ireland, of Bargaintown, was admitted to a room in the City Hospital here to see his wife, who about a month ago was knocked down by a Shore Line express near her home and sustained a fractured skull.

She hovered between life and death for three weeks, but several days ago began to improve.

"Who are you?" she enquired when her husband entered the room.

"Don't you know me?" enquired Mr. Ireland.

"No, I don't recall having met you," said the woman. "Was it at the party last week — the one after school closed?"

Mr. Ireland did not answer, but stepped outside to the corridor and sent in their five children, whose ages range from three years to fifteen. When they departed and the father returned again to the room, she said:

"It was nice to see some young folks again. Whose children were they that just left here?"

Fancies Herself a Girl.
Mr. Ireland said nothing, but, heartbroken, went outside and told one of the physicians that his wife did not seem to recognize either him or her sons and daughters.

"We feared that," the doctor said. "When she recovered consciousness, she began to talk about events of years ago. She fancied herself a young girl, unmarried and not long out of school. We hoped that your presence and that of the children might restore her memory."

Doctors Hold Out No Hope.
Incidents of her own children's youth, little things that any mother should know, Mrs. Ireland had not the slightest memory of. And even when her husband talked to her alone and tried to recall the most important happenings of their courtship and honeymoon, she did not remember.

Within a month or so, the doctors say, she will be able to leave the hospital and return to her home. But they hold forth no hope of her memory coming back.

Special Evening Telegram.
LONDON, To-day.

At an annual conference of the British Socialist party at Blackpool on Saturday, Chairman Irving said, "Twas the most disappointing, most dispiriting congress ever held, and complained there had been no progress and members showed no enthusiasm. On the eve of the Parliamentary holiday, the Chancellor of the Exchequer extended the olive branch to Unionist with the proposal that the land question should be made a non-party issue."
