Thrilling Rescue.

S.S. "LEHIGH" SAVES CREW OF
"BIANCA."

(Charleston American.)

After towing the disabled steamer Wahakum to Charleston, the Shipping Board steamship Lehigh, Capt.
James Deal, entered Charleston from Liverpool, having aboard the shipwrecked crew of the schooner Bianca which went down at sea.

The Wahakum herself had a shipwrecked crew aboard which she had picked up. The Lehigh came on the Wahakum in an opportune moment.
The vessel was leaking badly, was short of fuel and provisions, besides having the ten seamen to care for which she had picked up from a foundering barge. The rescue of the Wahakum took place northwest of the Bermudas, three days before reaching Charleston. As the Lehigh nearly pelted she flashed a wireless message to send out provisions for the vessels, which was done when the ship arrived off the bar. The Wahakum was towed to quarantine by the tugs Cecilia and Wabun, and yesterday was being fumigated.

This homeward bound trip of the Lehigh has been a memorable one for her young master, Capt. James Deal, a Charleston boy. Men whom he rescued declare there are no words which can adequately express their gratitude and thanks. A story that breathes of bravery true to the best traditions of the sea is told by Capt. M. Burke, of St. John's, Nfld., master of the schr. Bianca, which foundered at sea shortly after he and his men had been taken aboard the Lehigh by Capt. Deal. In speaking of the rescue, Capt. Burke said:

"The schr. Bianca was bound from Labrador to Gibraltar with a cargo of codfish. The second day out we ran into rough weather and sprang a leak. For four or five days we were in a most deplorable condition.
My men had to stand by the pumps and work in desperation.

"On the evening of the 31st of October, we saw the lights of a steamer.
We waited till she came abreast of us and then fired our flare-up displaying the Union Jack pointed downward. The vessel, which proved to be the Lehigh, answered our signal and stood toward us. When in speaking distance I told Capt. Deal that we had lost our boat and that my men were all but exhausted. A boat was sent out from the Lehigh. This was about 7 o'clock. By 9 o'clock we had all been taken aboard the rescue ship.

"I shall never forget the treatment accorded us. It is to be expected of a vessel to render assistance when the distress signal is given. To be saved from the sea is one thing, but to receive such treatment after rescue as was shown us is another.
There is no doubt about our being in a desperate condition, and a few more hours would have settled it for all time."

The schooner Bianca was valued at about $100,000, according to Captain Burke. She carried, when she left Labrador, 10,350 qts. of codfish.

The Lehigh brought a stowaway, an English woman, reported to be the wife of a mate on the ship. She was discovered when the ship was three days out from Liverpool. Among the crew was Mr. W. W. Clarke and Mrs.
Florence Clark, who applied for their discharge upon the arrival of the vessel in port yesterday.

The steamer Wahakum was in ballast from Rotterdam to Newport News.

They're Everywhere.

Mrs. Charlotte Cameron, the lady traveller who has recently returned from a journey through Alaska to the shores of the Polar Sea, tells an amusing story concerning an Irish prospector she met there.

Like many of his countrymen (says Mrs. Cameron) his ruling passion was a hatred for everything Scottish. One day he and his two companions came across a tribe of Eskimos ruled over by a chief whose name began with something that sounded like Cheito and ended in a sneeze.

After a supper of seal-meat and beans the Irishman started on his favourite topic, and said many nasty things about the way certain Scottish prospectors were exploiting claims in Alaska, when suddenly the chief with the unpronounceable name burst forth as follows:

"I'll tell ye what, ma mon, gin ye dour lowse yere tongue upon my country like that I'll ge ye a clout on the lug that'll mak' ye tingle fra this till Hallow'en!"

"Be jabbers!" cried the astonished Irishman, "I thought ye was an Eskimo!"

"And see I am an Eskimo the noo, ma braw chief," said the angry chief, "but ma feither's aul leather breeks ne'er travelled farther than jus fra Glasgow to Greenock and back again; and when I gang awa hame with the guld gold these gowks are getting for me"—indicating the members of his tribe by a sweep of the hand—"I'll just be Wully Forbes, son o' auld Daddy Forbes, o' the Corbials, for a' that's come an' gane!"

Can We Prolong Life?

With reference to the article published in Tit-Bits recently, in which our medical correspondent dealt with the contention of the French scientist who claims, by the introduction of certain glands into the human body, to be able to prolong life, and make old men young again, it is interesting to recall the discoveries of other scientists who claim to have found the elixir of life.

One of the most amazing theories put forward was that of Metchnikoff, who recommended those who wanted to live long to drink sour milk. His prescription was taken up by thousands, but so far there has been no great increase in the number of centenarians as a result of the sour milk crash.

The famous French physician, Dr.
Browne-Sequard, claimed to have invented an "elixir of life," a serum which he proposed to inject into the veins of the aged and the jaded, while a Swedish doctor spent many years working on his theory that the secret of perpetual youth lay in the introduction of a certain serum into the thyroid gland, or "Adam's Apple," which, according to experts, is the one mainly identified with ageing of the body.

Extraordinary results are claimed for the method of treatment invented some years ago by M. Quinton, of Paris. He contended that all living creatures had their origin in the seas, and that our complex bodies were simply large collections of cells and cellular bodies to be found in the seas.
Quinton argued that by injecting a preparation of sea water into the human body, the cells would be supplied with the original fluid from which they came. Thus would renewed vitality be secured, and disease and old age driven away. This is briefly the theory, and in actual practice it has proved one of the most wonderful remedies discovered.

The search for the elixir of life has continued for centuries, but we seem no nearer the solution!

A Long Nap.

SAILORS "FORTY WINKS" TAKE
UP 51 DAYS.

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 18.—Harry Joseph Harley, 26 years old, an enlisted man in the Navy, has just awakened from a sleep of 51 days. Before he went to sleep he weighed 186. When he awoke he weighed 85 pounds. He had neither food nor water during his long slumber. In fact, none of his comrades knew where he was. He was reported missing from day to day and was finally listed as a deserter.
The usual reward was offered for his apprehension.

Harley felt so drowsy one day, late in September, he crawled under a bungalow at the Hampton Roads Naval base intending to take a nap. He fell asleep promptly and did not come from under the bungalow until last Wednesday. He says he had no idea what had happened. He felt like he had just awakened from a sound sleep and excepting a dryness in his throat he did not notice anything was wrong until he attempted to stand on his feet. This he could not do. His clothes were too large for him and his hands were so thin the bones almost protruded at the knuckles.

Comrades came to his assistance and he was sent to the hospital at the base. Naval surgeons decline to discuss the case freely, but it is said that Harley has drunk seven gallons of milk since last Wednesday. He has gained several pounds, but he is not yet regarded as out of danger.

Naval surgeons from all over the country are coming here to take a look at Harley. Doctors say his is the strangest case on record. No unconscious person, according to physicians, has ever lived 51 days without either food or drink.

Wedding Bells.

A very pretty wedding took place on Nov. 9th, at the home of William North of Bay de Verde, when Miss Mazie Burt of Nova Scotia, and Mr.
James Moore of this city, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by the Rev. Father Mackey. The bride was attended by Miss G. Bridgeman, while Robert Moore, brother of the groom, acted as best man. After the marriage ceremony an enjoyable evening was spent. The couple were the recipients of many beautiful presents.—Com.

TUESDAY, Nov. 25.

There are many things which combine to make Mavis perfume attractive—the graciousness and sweetness of the perfume, the artistic and uncommon container, the general neatness and elegance of its appearance.
But behind all this are the association of the name with its suggestions of the mid Victorian period, of Jean Ingelow, and that much underrated "Spasmodic" poet Sydney Dohill, with his

"Mavis singing on the eve Singing for the silence of the eve," with its memories of the Romance languages from which the word is derived—we say throistic or song thrush in present day English, but neither name is so pretty. Anyway Mavis Perfume, and its companion Mavis Talcum are very fine and distinctive, and favorites with all who have used them. Price (Perfume) $2.50 a bottle. (Talcum) 50c. a tin.

Free Lunch.

Last evening an ex-soldier entered a Chinese restaurant and ordered a dinner, which he consumed with gusto, but which he found hard to pay for, evidently having in mind the H.C.L.— An altercation arose, and the proprietor seeing how things stood, went for the police, who were on the scene in a few minutes. No arrest was made however, as the soldier had decamped.
