WORK IN MARBLE SHOWS SAV IOUR BEARDLESS YOUTH OF WESTERN TYPE.

LONDON, Oct. 10 .- The Manchester Guardian reproduces a photograph and article describing what is believed to be the earliest known statue of

'This statue is one of the most re-

"These sarcopagi are carved in relief with Christ usually seated, as the central figure. Such reliefs conform rigidly to type and seem derived from some well-known prototype. It was immediately seen that the statue bore the closest resemblance to these figares of the sarcopagi.

"It is now believed that statue belongs to the end of the third or the beginning of the fourth century. The most striking feature is that the face is that of a beardless youth, this being in direct contrast with the usual portraits which show Him bearded and with a moustache and a sad expression. But this latter type is wholly an Oriental conception, while this re happy type is western. Many examples are preserved, but is statue is unquestionably the ear-

Newfoundland and Confederation.

(Ottawa Journal.) Confederation with Canada has always been a terrible spectre to some good people in Newfoundland. Years ago, after Mr. Shea, Prime Minister of the Colony, had visited Ottawa to discuss the question of union with Sir John MacDonald, his government went down to defeat, the following campaign song, used against him ecoming historic:

"Remember the day When Kelly and Shea Crossed over the say, To barter away

The rights of Terra Nova." That the ancient bugbear has not lost its vitality is evidenced by a story appearing in the St. John's Evening Advocate. In screaming type, the Advocate declares that certain Canadian interests have lodged Fovernment, against financial connterests, it is added, are attempting to get a combination of English pulp and paper manufacturers to join them to fight the concession to the Old Country, behind it all being a plot to compel union with Canada.
