From the Gallows to Parliament

EXTRAORDINARY CAREERS OF FORMER M.P.'S.

Though the members returned to Parliament at the General Election will doubtless include some remarkable men, none will be more extraordinary than numerous representatives of the people who have already sat in the House of Commons.

We have had blind M.P.'s, the most distinguished of whom was Mr. Fawcett, Postmaster-General in Gladstone's second Administration. There have been armless members, and at least two who were legless as well, one being Mr. Arthur Kavanagh, who had to be carried into the House on the back of an attendant. Men of color, including pure-blooded negroes, have also represented English constituencies and again and again convicts and ex-convicts have been sent to Westminster.

Saved An Empress's Life.

One of the men intended by the electors to go from Prison to Parliament, was Mr. John Mitchell. He founded in 1848 the "United Irishman," and for certain articles which appeared he was tried for "treason-felony," and sentenced to fourteen years' transportation. Escaping from Van Diemen's Land in 1864, he took refuge in the United States, whence he returned to Ireland. Shortly afterwards he was elected unopposed for Tipperary, and, on being declared ineligible, re-elected. He died, however, the same month.

In 1882, when Mr. Michael Davitt was actually the elect of Math, he was sent back to prison for infringing the conditions of his ticket of leave. The famous agitator was later a familiar figure at Westminster.

Of M.P.'s who, though doomed to death, lived to sit among the nation's law-makers, Mr. James O'Kelly was a picturesque and remarkable representative. Innumerable were his adventures before he came to Westminster. He fought for the French against the Prussians, saved the life of the Empress of Brazil, was lost for a year in the Sudan, and had scores of close calls in Canada, Mexico and Algeria.

But his most remarkable experience was when, as a young man, he represented a Cuban paper. Arrested as a spy when that country was in the throes of civil war, he was condemned to death and led out to execution. Just as the rifles of the firing party were about to be levelled at him, the United States Consul dashed up and saved him. Many years afterwards he was returned for Roscommon.

Little less strange were the vicissitudes of Mr. J. F. K. D'Brien. For complicity in a Fenian rising, he was sentenced to be hanged, drawn, and quartered, but, in consideration of the gallantry he displayed during a fire, when, at great risk to himself, he rescued some women and children, his sentence was commuted to penal servitude for life, and after his liberation he was returned to Parliament.

Mr. A. Lynch was another member who, though condemned to death by the law, was subsequently honored by an electorate. In 1903 he was prosecuted for high treason because he had fought on the side of the Boers in the South African War. The sentence on him—that he be hanged—was subsequently commuted to penal servitude for life; but he was released on license in 1904, received a "free pardon" in 1907, and sat for a constituency in the House of Commons.

$ 10,000 MOSQUE FOR LONDON.

His Holiness the Khalifat-ul-Masiah laid the foundation-stone of a mosque in the garden of 68, Melrose Road, Southfields, Wandsworth, recently. Among those present were the Japanese Ambassador, the German Charge d'Affaires, the Estonian and Albanian Ministers, the Serbian Consul, and the Mayor of Wandsworth. The Turkish Government was represented. It is intended to erect a building having all the usual characteristics and accompaniments of a Moslem mosque at a cost of about £10,000, for which funds are in hand. At present, however, only the Mihar, or praying place, is to be built.

A Woman's Brain in Agricultural Problems

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 10.—(Canadian Press)—A woman's brain is behind the research carried out by the Oxford University Institute of Agricultural Engineering into the problem of how to make the farmer independent of weather conditions in harvesting his crops. The wife of Capt. B. J. Owen, the director of the Institute, suggested the hairdressers' use of hot air for hair-drying as a guide in solving the problem. Captain Owen tried the idea with very satisfactory results. Haystacks dried with hot air in ten hours at a cost much less than that of drying in a field by ordinary means. The principle of the process, which was demonstrated to farmers and representatives of the Ministry of Agriculture, at the University Farm, Sandford, near Oxford, is to drive hot air into the central chamber of a hay or corn rick and radiate it to all the parts.

THE COMMON FAULT.

If someone asked me, chin to chin, when meeting me upon my way, "What is the chief besetting sin of people of this modern day?" I'd answer, with a ghastly grin, "With solemn things they lightly play. Man's words no longer worth a cent, his promise fades like April snow; in truth he makes a daily dent, and sheds a smile that this is so; I'm waiting now to meet a gent who should have met me hours ago. The man who strictly keeps his word is viewed with wonder and amazement; he's thought a rather queer old bird, a relic of pre-glacial days; such crankiness is most absurd, observe the blithe, forgetful jays." And if I speak in bitter tones, it is because all men are late; it seems no one a conscience owns, or tries to keep a promise straight; I had a rendezvous with Jones at six o'clock, and now it's eight. The workman says he will appear at eight o'clock to fix my pump; the teamster says he will be here to haul my lead oats to the dump; the bottle will deliver beer as fast as his old nags can hump. And no one ever keeps his word; a promise is a trifle small; to keep engagements is absurd, there is no sense in that, at all; with difficulty I'm deterred from springing lectures in a hall. Alas, it's little use to scold, or melancholy changes ring, for delegates who do not hold a promise as a sacred thing, cannot be moved by language bold to make their pledges stick and cling.

PAINS ACROSS THE BACK

Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mitchell, Ontario.—"I have taken your medicine for a number of years. I do not take it steadily all the time, but I am never without it. I always keep it in the house. I took it first for pains in the abdomen and bearing-down pains, headaches and pains across the back. I have my knees to look after and many a day I could not get up at all. I saw the advertisement in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and Mrs. John Miller told me about it, too. Every time I take it, it makes me feel better and I always recommend it to my friends. I am willing to answer letters from women asking about this medicine and you may use this letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. F. J. WASSMANN, Mitchell, Ontario.

The merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is told by women to each other. Many women know by experience what this medicine will do and they are anxious for others to know. Such testimony should cause any woman suffering from the troubles so common to her sex to give this well-known medicine a fair trial. Do you know that in a recent canvass among women users of the Vegetable Compound over 220,000 replies were received. To the question, "Have you received benefit by taking this medicine?" 98 per cent. replied "Yes." This means 98 out of every 100 women are in better health because they have given this medicine a fair trial.

Topsy-Turvy Sammy

A BOY WHO SEES THINGS WRONG WAY ROUND.

You have often looked into a mirror and noticed how everything seems to be the wrong way round. Things which are really coming towards you seem to be moving away, and things which are coming from the left look as though they are coming from the right. How would you like it if you always saw things like this—if the whole world to you was a world in a looking-glass?

This is the unfortunate position of Sammy Tiana, an American boy. He sees everything the wrong way round, which makes life very difficult for him. When we look at anything, the light carries its image through the lens of the eye along the optic nerve to the brain. The image passes along the nerve upside down and is righted by what is called the vision centre of the brain. In Sammy's case the image is turned the right way up, but, for some reason, the wrong way round. This rare disease is called mirror vision.

An Incurable Disease.
There are some strange results. Sammy writes backwards, just like the writing you see on blotting paper. If a person hands him something with his right hand, Sammy tries to take it from his left. He has to be very careful in crossing the road when he is out, because a car which seems to him to be going away is really coming towards him.

As he sees all writing backwards, reading is a difficult and slow task. The doctors who have studied the case say that they cannot cure Sammy because the defect is not in his eyes but in the part of the brain which receives the image of what he sees. Sammy's hearing is much better than that of most people, and he has learned in some cases almost to see with his ears.
