

Cancer and Cockroaches

Dr. Sambon's Germ Theory—Medical Doubts.

Sir James Cantlie, a well-known parasitologist, makes remarkable claims, which will arouse much interest, in his "foreword" to a book published recently, and reviewed below, dealing with cancer and with certain investigations carried out by Dr. L. W. Sambon, lecturer in the London School of Tropical Medicine.

Sir James says that owing to Dr. Sambon's researches "two important facts stand out: (1) Cancer is a parasite disease; (2) the control of cancer is within our reach."

These claims are not widely admitted in the medical profession. On the contrary it is maintained that this theory of the origin of cancer as being due to a parasite is not new, but is based on the researches of the Danish biologist Fibiger, who ten years ago published the results of experiments which suggested that cancer in rats is caused by a parasite which infests cockroaches.

Fibiger's views may have some basis of fact, but they are not yet generally accepted. They are still subject to test and examination, and may be proved or disproved.

PESTS THAT NURSE THE GERM.

New Cancer Facts. D. Masters. Foreword by Sir James Cantlie.

This book is written in a clear and interesting style. It does not reject irritation as a factor in cancer, but it contends that parasites play their part in the disease, and that the germs may be one of those minute organisms that remain invisible under a microscope and even pass through scientific filters.

After describing Dr. Sambon's work in tracing other diseases to parasites Mr. Masters states:

He knew that the best place in which to study a disease was where it occurred, so he determined to examine the homes of people who were dying of cancer, the conditions in which they lived, their surroundings, anything and everything, in fact, which might shed a little light on the disease.

He investigated certain places in the Italian Romagna and in Iceland, where cancer is peculiarly prevalent, and where there was cancer found in profusion signs of rats, mice, blackbeetles, cellar beetles, meal-worms, and meal-mites, and even the trail of cancer was most marked, there were the pests.

There were some distinct link-tiny parasitic worms that begin life in either the cockroach, the meal-worm, or the cellar beetle and mature in rats and mice.

More, in the one district of Iceland which is free from cancer, Dr. Sambon found that no rats, mice, or cockroaches have ever been seen. The lava and turf built cottages were free of these household pests.

It proves that the cockroach theory is correct, then obviously cancer can be controlled by getting rid of these loathsome insects. But a word of warning is necessary. It is not yet proved.

DR. SAMBON ON HIS WORK.

Dr. Sambon's own view is interesting and important. He refused to discuss his work further beyond pointing out that he made no claim to the discovery of the cause of cancer, nor did he assert that blackbeetles and rats were the sole contributory causes. His theory was that cancer was probably caused by a parasite which only became active when the human flesh was prepared for its activities by another agency, a worm which lives in rats, mice, cockroaches, and the like, and is transferred to human beings by the contamination of food. In the human being it sets up conditions necessary for the activity of the cancer parasite.—Daily Mail.

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

SPRING OR AUTUMN?

I tilt to-day at a tradition. The tradition that autumn is the time of all the year when we feel a gentle melancholy and a sense of passing youth.

It seems to me that it is spring rather than autumn that is haunted with memories and turbulent with a nebulous melancholy.

Nothing brings memories crowding in upon me like the first days of spring.

The First Shadow Pattern. Spring school days come back upon me. I am walking back home at noon from school and for the first time I see the shadow pattern of the trees upon the pavements below.

Or again it is later in the spring of those long June evenings when the simplest games seem to have a special enchantment about them!

The Days That Come Back.

Sometimes it is some individual day that inexplicably haunts my thoughts. Perhaps a day made outstanding by a special event, like the day in June when big brother came home with the thrilling news that he was going to take me to the circus that night. (It's a commentary on the quality of human joys that I vividly remember the thrill of the announcement but cannot bring back the circus itself at all.) Or some day that clings in memory for no reason that can put one's finger on—the day when we went into the woods after cowslips, or the day I went out into the yard because dinner wasn't quite ready and watched a robin building his nest in the apple tree.

That Troubling Wish For Youth.

Mother and home memories are always most poignant to me in the spring, and the memory of those who have gone away. There is something about the season that makes one's heart especially tender. And in the spring the wish to be young again is always most troubling. At other times in the year I am content with what the years have brought. I can say: "Grow old along with me, the best of life is yet to be," with faith and conviction. But there are times in the spring when the longing to get back into childhood and have it all again suddenly crowds out that peace and contentment.

Perhaps we are made differently, some so that their season of looking backward comes in autumn, and some so that it is spring that opens the door of the heart for memories.

I wonder how it is with you?

THE SUNNY SMILE.

A sunny smile is useful through out our passing years; it's better than a cruise full of bitter, brackish tears; it says to us, "Be jolly, let no misfortune daunt," it says to melancholy, "Aloft, and eke a vaunt!" It's good to keep on throwing the smile that does not wilt, until your teeth are showing their caverns plugged with gilt. A smile is much more helpful than any style of frown, than any protest yelp that sends our spirits down. But now and then a fellow, who springs throughout the year, a smile serene and mellow, gets notions rather queer. He smiles, in princely splendor, and then the idea gets it should be legal tender, and liquidate his debts. We tell, when he is running for justice of the peace, for votes we all go gunning, our efforts do not cease. He smiles upon us grandly, he smiles on every gent, he smiles so sweetly, blandly, he fills up with content. But if we ask a favor his course is often rude, his observations savor of rank ingratitude. And if we're hailed before him for speeding with our trucks, our explanations bore him, he fines us twenty bucks. A smile is quickly faded, its splendor one forgets, if it is hawked or traded in payment of old debts. The man who thinks his smiling will settle all he owes is foolish, he is piling up cords of future woes. We have to buy our raiment, our rainsticks and our tiles, and we need better payment than bright sun-shiny smiles.
