Province, and there will be great human nature.

Our contemporary reveals its soreness in an editorial, headed, "A Misdirected Campaign." It objects to a heading reading "Abandoned Farms of Middesex Cry Out for the Plow." There are no abandoned farms in Middlesex, it contends. The meaning of "abandoned" as given in Webster's Standard Dictionary is "forsaken, deserted." The Free Press cannot send a man eight saken" farms and farmhouses. True, the colts of some neighboring farmer may be cropping grass on the front sense, perhaps, the farms have not en abandoned. The taxes are still being paid, but the only use a great "abandoned." Any man in London with steerage. an automobile will tell the Free Press that there are scores and scores of in this county:

The only party which living from this, there is now but party in power. one tenant for the whole 500 acres.' If this dealer were asked for a literal definition of "abandoned," he would not hesitate to point to the unworked acres.

It is this state of things that The Advertiser is trying to remedy. In that work it would be glad to have the co-operation of the Free Press and all its contemporaries in Ontario, This journal has had a commissioner visiting every county in Western Ontario to describe the advantages of the fairest and most fertile section of Canada, and point the way to the most profitable use of the soil. . The Advertiser is laboring for a renascence of Ontario agriculture. Of this awakening there Mothers' Clubs Have Heard So are already many signs.
