Would Rather Be An Ugly Woman Than a Plain One

"So Many Ugly Women Are So Darned Homely That They're Beautiful."

By JULIA HOYT.

The other day I said I would rather be an ugly woman than a plain one (which really means an uninteresting one) and I really meant it. Out the four or five ugly women om you know, are there not at least three who are intensely interesting in some indescribable way? Perhaps they dress better, perhaps they make more of an effort for the other perinterestingin everything, in living, let us say, that you cannot think of them as ugly after talking to them. So often this has happen-ed to me. Any-thing really ugly must have char acter to be so and consequently is of interest. Once I had

When he saw me, he began a series of ecstatic howls that soon attracted the attention of the baggage master. On finding it was merely a case of terrier and mistress being reunited, he grinned sympathetically at me, and then, with an appraising eye upon my darling said, "Gee, Miss! That mutt's darned homely that he's beauti-

People say of her, "What a stunning person!" "What a raconteuse" and What magnificent taste in clothes." And all the while she chuckles, tongue in check, for she knows she is only using the little means at hand to gain these large rewards.
But don't forget that, like all re-

OFFICER RESCUES RUSSIAN TRYING TO END OWN LIFE

Canadian Press Despatch. Niagara Falls, Ont., Dec. 9.-Tony Maluski, a Russian employed by the Norton Company at Chippewa, attempted to commit suicide by jumping into the Chippewa Creek yesterday. He was rescued by Provincial Officer Tom Green, who rowed out in a boat. The man, judging by his mutterings, went out of his mind through worry about his wife and family who are in Russia. He will e committed to the asylum.
