BRIGHT AT BIRMINGHAM. One of the Magistrates Formerly a 25

CELEBRATING HIS TWENTY-FIVE YEARS IN PARLIAMENT.

LONDON, June 15 .- Birmingham has been more or less en fete for a week, the occasion being Mr. John Bright's five and twentieth year of representation of that well-known manufacturing borough. The "illustrious Tribune" has received gifts of value, and tokens of frienship moro precious than gems. He richly deserves all the honor that can be conferred upon him. Speaking to a vast multitude assembled at Bingley hall he referred with satisfaction to the future. He is indeed a happy man who can do this. Mr. Bright's optimism should help the liberal party. That was well amough in Cobden's day, with the was well enough in Cobden's day, with the watested prediction that all the world would be a free trader, and that the universal adoption of unfettered international business would abolish large standing ar mies. Mr. Bright speaks as if this had been accomplished, or at all events as though we are on the eve of such a millennium, Unhappily Europe and the East is thick with the cemetaries of new battle grounds and the future is full of the grim promise of more. Mr. Bright speaks as he hopes. "You can make the bells say what you please," said the priest. Similarly you can interpret the signs of the times as heat suits your imaginations. of the times as best suits your imaginations or your hopes. Mr. Bright dreams dreams: They are delightful dreams. He sees in the future universal peace, the only competition among the nations being commercial, with trade and manufactures unfettered by law or custom. Mr. Bright fixes his chief hopes of the future in the tariff movement

Mr. Joseph Chamberlain spoke on this same occasion, and while his great leader sees in the free circulation of manufactures the regeneration of society, the other honorable member for Birmingham predicts orable member for Birmingham predicts similar results from equal electoral districts and every man who is not a criminal or a pauper with a vote to cast into the ballotbathar with a vote to cast into the ballot-box. "Forgive me if I dream," said Mr. Bright at the ead of an eloquent peroration. "I will believe in a better time, and if christianity of not a fable, as I believe and

Lord Salisbury to the great gathering of his grateful constituents they groaned and hissed, signifying in true English fashion their detestation of the tory chief and his doctrines. Curiously enough, Lord Salis-bury was addressing the Kingston and district workingmen's conservative association on the same night. Almost at the same moment Lord Salisbury was speaking of Mr. there was a keener sting in their reception of the name of Mr. Bright. Here is the incident and the personal compliment which Lord Salisbury paid to the distinguished member for Birmingham:

member for Birmingham:

"Well turn your eyes again to what is taking place at Birmingham this moment. [Laughter.] They are celebrating the praises of the great advocate of peace, the denouncer of all wars. [Renewed laughter.] I am not surprised that they do so, for I admit that the genius which Mr. Bright has displayed, the splendid qualities that have adorned his carer, the fidelity and conviction which under all circumstances he has exhibited, whatever you may think of his opinions—and we most of us differ from them whoely—[cheers and laughter]—tend to the honor bof the constituency which he represents. But you caunot-look at that celebration without remembering that those very opinions o. Mr. Eright, for which he left the government, were among the strongest recommendations of that government to the electors in 1880.

Lord Salisbury then drew a picture re-

Lord Salisbury then drew a picture representing the government as doing in office everything they had promised not to do when in power, and no one will the better appreciate this then Mr. Bright, who withdrew from the cabinet because he objected to the foreign policy of his colleagues. HANLAN AT HOME.

Interview with the Champion Last Nigh from Pullman per Credit Valley railway 3:30 yesterday afternoon. A World renight. The champion enjoyed the regatta very much. I received, he said, the best of treatment, and in addition to $1000 I won, the association presented me with a purse of $500. Both races were a walk over. I never was in such good condition and rowing so well before, and I may say that I did not have to row at all.

How about Teemer? He is the making of a wonderfully good man. He is the best novice at the oars I ing heard that I was refused a license in Toronto, several gentlemen made a proposition to me. They offered to fit up for me a saloon, with restaurant, billiards, etc., attached, they to get 25 per cent. of the gross receipts and the balance to come to me. This naturally led to the question as to whether or not he would accept this offer. Mr. Hanlan replied that he had the matter under consideration. At present he hardly under consideration. At present he hardly knows what to do.

It's just like this, continued the chamfriends. I don't want to sell liquor more than any other man, and don't ask for a license on account of my doings as an oarsman, but solely on the merits of my house. I have invested $30,000 in it, and think I have not been fairly treated. house. I have invested $30,000 in it, and think I have not been fairly treated. Wherever I go people can't do too much for me, but here I can't even get a license. If I had not been so well treated in this city I would have crept a little before I jumped and not invested my capital in this basiness.

As far as the general citizens are concerned I don't think they would like to see me lose this money, but if I don't get a yearly license I will either have to sell out or close up, as it won't pay me to look at the place. Fortunately I have made enough money this season to keep me fer a while, but supposing I had not been blessed with health and strength this year, where would I have found myself. Is there anything in the report that you intend to settle in Chicago?

Well, I'll tell you how it occurred. Having heard that I was refused a license in houses or have fied to the bluff. The loss is almost incalculable. The town of St. Marys, on the Missouri side, is partly submarys, or the Missouri side, is partly submarys, or the Missouri side, is merged, and Kaskakia, on the Illinois side, will be abandoned by the people, who have sent here for a steamer to carry them away. East of that embankment from Brooklyn and Venice on the river bank northward to Newport, Namcoki and Mitchell up the bottom for a dozen miles or more there is nothing but a broad expanse of water and the scene is one of desolation and ruin. Three quarters of Brooklyn is under water and only one street in Venice and a bit of high ground in the northern part of the town is above the flood level.
> In East St. Louis all the lowlands are inundated to a depth varying from ten to twenty feet and a hundred houses within the city limits have their lower floors flooded and many of them their second stories. South of the city the entire bottom for an indefinite distance, including the villages east of Carondelet and Cahokia, are submerged and all the farms for miles down the river are under water. The loss by the destruction of crops and other farm property cannot be even approximated, but there is hardly a doubt but the aggregate loss on the American bottom between Alton and Cairo will run into the millions. Nearly as much bottom land direct the river on the Missouri side, most of which is subject to the overflow, and hundreds of thousands of acres of land along the Misscuri river and its tributaries between here and Kansas City now lie under the devastating flood and have been swept of
