THE GOVERNOR GENERALSHIP. The moment when a change is taking place in the incumbency of this high office is a good time to make a few obvious remarks and point a useful moral. The political functions of the governor-general of Canada have been cut down till they amount to so little that they are no longer worth considering in such a connection. The instructions given to Lord Lorne in the Letellier crisis left him no discretion, and it is lifficult to imagine a situation in which a governor-general would now, under such instructions, be at liberty to disregard the advice of his minister in any purely Canadian affair. His political function is to carry out their plans so far as they do not conflict with those of the imperial government, and it is very seldom indeed that any uch conflict occurs. It is different with the social side of the ubernatorial office. The occupant of the rice-regal throne is the apex of the social fabric of the dominion, and in this lofty position he can be a great power for good for evil according to his line of action. This is true to a large extent also the wife of the governor. She observed of all observers the from a social point of view, she gives the tone to a certain eminent circle and it depends largely on herself whether that tone is a good one or not. Lord and Lady Dufferin left on all around them the impress of extravagance in expenditure, the country footing the bills. Nothing of this sort can be charged against Lord Lorne and the Princess Louise, but the latter is fairly chargeable with neglect of an important duty. She availed herself of every opportunity and every excuse to get as far and as her plain duty was to remain there during the chief part of her time.

No one who knows anything of Ottawa society can blame the princess for disliking it. The very atmosphere is redolent of snobbery and that of the most parvenu kind. We are accustomed to laugh at the occasional exposures of the true inwardness of Washington social life, but we can afford to do so only when we succeed in shutting our eyes to the state of matters in our own capital. At her very first reception in Rideau hall the princess was disgusted to meet with men high in political and judicial life who were in a state of actual intoxication, and to one who had been accustomed to mingle only with wellbred people nothing could have given a greater shock. To make matters worse, she was given to understand that the right to revise the visiting list of Rideau hall was one of the perquisites of the prime minister's wife. Whether she accepted this view of the matter or not, she seems to have thought it easier to keep away from what displeased her than to keep it away from her. From the Regina Lead A special train made up of fourteen cars. and a locomotive went through Regina recently bound for Moose Jaw. It contained teams, men and outfit for the establishment of experimental farms along the line of the C. P. R. west of Moose Jaw. So much having been said adverse to the land west of Moose Jaw, the company conceived the idea of establishing farms to test the lard thoroughly. The train was made up of four cars of mules and horses, four cars of fuel, two boarding and sleeping cars, not bargage car, land commissioner and assistant's car and caboose. First ground will be broken west of Moose Jaw at the entrance to the coteau. The system will be to stap at the farm selected, plough during the day and move on the next farm during the night, arriving in time to repeat the operation of the day before. Farms will thus be started about forty miles apart between Moose Jaw and Calgary, and it is expected that on these the company will have broken this fall about 600 acres. In the spring buildings will be put up and a farmer located on each farm sufficiently equipped with stock and mach-inery to break 400 ac es next season. -Who has not seen the fair, fresh young
