WEDNESDAY, August 18th, 1897. -The English press is practically a unit in its commendation of the Salisbury government for the bold step they recently took in abrogating the German and Belgian com- R. Shipley. mercial treaties in order to meet Canada's freer trade propositions. It looked like a return to protection, but the intention was not to protect English industries. If England has grown wealthy under free trade conditions, she need not now close her markets to the world; but she has recognized the need of developing a trade within the Empire which will atrengthen her hands by onies. This creation of new ties between the mother country and colonies is not regarded very favorably however by those European nations who will suffer from England's discrimination in favor of her colonies and many harsh things are being said ies and many harsh things are being said against her change of policy. These objections but indicate the importance of the importance of the received and for sale at Shipley's. 21 li step, and now that it has been taken, Canada may well congratulate herself on having grasped the situation, and on the ready response with which her appeal for closer government. The London Daily Mail takes matter-of-fact view of the question and tal standpoint thus: -- "Our Canadian friends may fairly look to us to meet them in a helpful spirit. They want to unite the British empire, so far as their share of it is concerned, by selling us their food-stuffs and by buying our manufactures. We are, of course, quite ready to sell. Let us be equally ready to buy. If Canada can give us as good butter and eggs as we now import from France, let Canadian produce rule on the British breakfast table. There must be reciprocity if the plan is to succeed. And that way lies the welfare of England and the Empire. We want a backbone of commercial interest to stiffen the sentiment of imperial union. live a working life for it unless it is based on a good business foundation. Canada is anxious to work with us for the good of the empire—and Canada in particular. We can which takes place on Monday next, August surely work with her for the same estimable 23rd.

—The great fight is on between the prohibitionists and the friends of the liquor traffic in the Dominion. From Syduey to Vancouver a campaign is being opened to influence the antiscipated plebiscite. The battles may be bloodless, but they will be hard feught and the results will indicate the strength of the two great armies in Canada, and determine the course of the government in dealing with that most important of all public questions—the regulation or prohibition of the liquor traffic. The postponement of the plebiscite, which, it was expected, would have been taken last spring, dampened the ardor of the temperance people and weakened their faith in the promises of the federal administration, but they have been, whipped into line again and have now inaugurated such a fight as will celipse any previous demonstration of probibition principles in British North America. Thousands of dollars will be spent in circulating approved literature, and the services of the ablest advocates of temperance form will be secured to combat the rum fiend and outbe secured to combat the rum fiend and out-law every branch of the traffic. When the temperance people exhibit such an earnest-ness the government will hardly dare decline to put the plebiscite in motion. We are convinced that the question of a relevant convinced that the question of a paltry $7,000,000 of revenue will not stand in the way of a satisfactory solution of the temperance problem.

The provincial transportation lines are now carrying hundreds of tourists through Evangeline's land, and that more do not tarry at the various points of interest along the line is due, in part, to the insufficient advertising of the various resorts. So far as we can learn varmouth Dieby. Kentyille -The provincial transportation lines are as we can learn Yarmouth, Digby, Kentville and Wolfville are the points at which the majority of visitors pass their time in this valley. An enterprising Wolfville man leased Acadia Seminary boarding house last spring, fifted it up for summer boarders and then proceeded to advertise his town and house before they were separated. then proceeded to advertise his town and house by circulating some thousands of neat little descriptive brochures. The result has been that there are now overseventy tourists staying at the Seminary Hotel, nearly all of whom are Americans. It has taken systematic advertising, in which tens of thousands of dollars have been spent, to make Nova Scotia a point of interest to the tourist, and the work of the transportation companies the work of the transportation companies should be supplemented by work on the part of the boards of trade in the various towns and by individual effort, if the full measure of profit is to be obtained from the ever increasing influx of summer visitors. Many of our hotel men would be well repaid if they would exhibit the same enterprise as does the proprietor of Acadia Seminary Hotel. the work of the transportation companies the proprietor of Acadia Seminary Hotel.

been exacted, and it is quite natural that Canadians should object to paying a United States duty on goods purchased in Europe and for use in Canada. In addition to this phase of the tariff, the Washington authorties are now threatening to impose an extraten per cent. duty on all goods imported into the United States from Europe and Asia by way of Canadian ports. Such an enactment way of Canadian ports. Such an enactment | to .30.

the United States from Europe and Asia by way of Canadian ports. Such an enactment would be a heavy blow to the trade of the St. Lawrence and British Columbia, and particularly to the Canadian Pacific Steamship Co. Canada would be very apt to retaliate by at once stipulating that all importations for Canadians should enter by Canadian ports, and Portland, Me., would no longer be called a Canadian winter port. In regard to the first named tax, it will have a tendency to make Canadians travel by Canadian ships, and contribute to the revenues of their own country any tax on the dutiable goods they may carry.

The reports from Manitoba and the great grain growing districts of the Northwest are very encouraging. The wheat crow will be fully up to last year's, and that, was a record breaker. Fortune has a kinder smile for the Western farmer than for his esisten brothers. In the west the largest grain crop in the history of the country was disposed of in the highest market that has province, our farmers with the largest apple crop on record, met with most disappointing returns from a glutted market. The prospects for long prices for wheat are better now-than they were last year, as recent advices from Russia indicate a heavy shortage in the Russian crop that will confine that country to a very small export, and the market is now on the rise. It is to be hoge that our Nova Scotia farmers will this year at least be able to realize stiff prices for the products of their farms. They will not have an average crop in any one staple outside of hay and possibly grain, and the outlook is not remarked the winner will be marked the winner will be and and denouled from the southward drove him of such the revolutions of Canadian ports. When he found that he could not make port he wisely took in sail and anchored. Just as it was growing dusk four experienced boatmen from Margaretville in an open boat a sudden squal from the south

The nuptial knot was tied by Rev. H. Howe, the officiating elergyman, the church being very prettily decorated for the occasion. After the ceremony the newly wedded couple left the church, the organ pealing forth a wedding march, the church bells ringing and the cannon on Fort Anne booming forth a salute in their honor. From the church the happy couple were driven to the railway station, where a large crowd of friends had preceded them to extend congratulations and wish them bon voyage. And amid showers of rice and the explosion of-torpedoes the happy couple left by train of torpedoes the happy couple left by train on route to St. John on an extended wedding tour.
