Tim's Extends Hours For Cops

The long-standing joke about cops and doughnut shops is being taken seriously by Tim Hortons in Sackville.

The chain's downtown location has extended its hours until next Sunday.

The change was made to serve the 1,000 plus RCMP officers staying on the Mount Allison University campus while providing security during the Francophonie Summit in Moncton.

Since Sunday the store has been opened until 11 p.m. It's usually open until 9 p.m. through the week and until 5 p.m. on the weekends.

Manager Lisa Hicks said on Monday business had already begun to pick up as the first of officers began arriving. She said she was expecting a sizable increase in business as the week progressed.

Hicks has her own theory about why police are so fond of Tim Hortons.

"It's the girls that serve them," she said with a chuckle.

The Harper Lane/Main Street Tim's location will maintain its usual closing time of midnight. That location was also noting a small increase in business as of Monday.
