Our contemporary says — If a Ca holic talked that way here how he would be stigmatized as — an enemy of our public schools and — a secret emissary of Rome by the new Rinownthings and their newspaper sympathizers.

The new educational institution which the Christian Brothers proposed to establish at Irvington, Now bork, has been given up for the present. The energies of the Order will be concentrated on the development of the city institutions.

The famous artist, Thomas Hovendern, a native of Dummanway, county Cork, Irsland, met a hero's death near his home at Norristown, Pa., on the 14th inst. He was killed by a Pennsylvania Railroad freight train while trying to resous a little girl. The section of Mr. Hovendern's life was useless, because the child that he attempted to save also mut her death beneath the wheels of the engine that ground out the life of the artist. The section to courred at a grade crossing on the Trenton cut-off of the Ponnsylvania Railroad.

Bishop McDonuell has given permission to Bernard Earle, a well known Roman Catholic layman, to donate twenty-seven acres of land and the building thereon at Hicksville, Queen's county, L.I., to the community of Trappiet monks at Tre Fontana, in Rome, of which the Very Rev. Edmund Obrecht is superior. A year ago Father Obrecht was in this country trying to raise funds for an American monastery for Trappist monks. The priest was particularly impressed with Brooklyn as the best location for the monastery.

Upon being questioned concerning Sunday closing in New York, Cardinal Gibbons upon his return to America the other day, said: "I saw little in hen ewspapers abroad, and not knowing the circumstancer of the excise the other day, said: "I saw little in hen ewspapers abroad, and not knowing the circumstancer of the excise of section in this city, I can give no expression of opinion. My views on the question of keeping the Eabbath holy, however, I have already expressed in Baldimore. As I have said, I am absolutely in favor of Sunday closing. I am in favor of keeping the Eabbath holy, But not alone does the Church demand that Sunday shall be observed. Nature, too, makes this demand. Every man should have one day of rest in the week. On the Babbath I would have the discontinuing for the day of all secular pursuits. In many parts of Europa I was shocked to see men and women wrizing in the fields on the Sabbath. In Holland they observe the Sabbath most descently, as it should be observed."

Bav. Peter J. Mueller, S.J., died at Canisius College, Buffalo, on Saturday macning, Aug. 24th. He was born reser Cologne, Germany, Sept 80, 1889, and entered the Society of Jesus Oct. 15, 1863, he was for several years preacher and missionary. In 1866 he was military chaplain in Bobemia during the war between Trussia and Austria, and again in France, in 1871, during the Franco-German war. When the Jesuits were basished from the German empire, soon after the war in which many of these had attended the sick, several even at a cost of their lives, Father Mealler went to Stonyhurst College, Lancashire, England, to teach German and to study the English language. In September, 1874, he came to the united States and was made professor of Lastin and Greek at Canisius College, in which position he remained to the and of his life, with the exception of a few years spent in Prairie du Chien, Wis.

"Do you think, sir," said the girl's mether, "that you have ratione and torbearance to be a kind-hearted husband?" "Madam," replied the young man, in earnest tones, "I can put a let collar on a 15 shirt without saying a single, word." And she consented to the match at once.

It has been suggested that young fruit trees should be trained with the roots on the two sides only, so that by bearing on the trees they might be land down on one side and covered in the Winter, for protection. But this plan has net yet been found practicable, for the reason that the tree needs all its roots, and the continual cutting away of half the roots must so weaken it as to make it unprofitable. The suggestion has never been carried into practice yet, and it is not probable it will ever be on this account and other reasons equally unfavorable.

The disease of cattle known as black leg or black quarter and by physicians as anthrax or carbuncular crysipiclas, is communicable to persons, and is invaryably fatal by the poisoning of the blood by the virus when taken in by any scratch or wound on the person. Thus it is about as dangerous to skin an animal dead of this disease as to handle a live rattlessake. It should not be attempted except by some careful expert, knowing the danger of it, as the least cut of the knife used will inoculate the person. Many dentist yearly occur from this cause. Even handling the hide is full of danger.

There is room for every kind of sheep in the world. Even the fat tailed sheep of Africa has found a suitable home in the fat sailed sheep of Africa has found a suitable home in the far Southwestern arid pastures. The recent importation of a sheep from Central England, and a district of very small area, known as the Lonk breed, calls attention to this fact and suggests the possibility of the probability of making the new arrival welcome as a desirable possibility of the probability of making the new arrival welcome as a desirable clincoin and the smooth, trim, and aristocratic Southdown. It is a fairly good mutton, and has a useful floece to the present fashion of clothing. It would be excellent for a home sheep under the old regime, when the farmers daughters spun the wood in the Winter adult of the high spun the wood in the Winter adult of the high spun the wood in the Winter adult of the high spun the wood in the Winter adult of the high spun the wood in the Winter adult of the high spun the wood in the Winter adult of the high spun the wood in the Winter adult of the high spun the wood in the Winter and the fact of the focks in the day and passed the pleasant evenings in pursuit of the little winged Cupid in the family of the neighbors. It is hardy, and in every way a farmer's sheep, and a common, native sheep, and, by selecting in the media of the progony for a few years in time might be produced a very close resemblance to this hitherto unnoticed English breed, a real small-farmer's sheep.

The visible extinction of the horse, as we have known this useful animal as a beast of burden and kept for our pleasure, is apparently within our near view. He has disappeared with all the disagreeable connections from the car routs in the cities to a large extent, and the completion of his withdrawal is at hand. As a road, draught, and riding animal he is about to be discharged from service, for the auto-motive carriage propelled by an engine worked by some of the newer combustibles for the making of the nergine worked by some into use, and is alroady disposing of the horse power formerly used. The improvement of our roads that has been effected recent-plant of the complete worked by some and the way for these carriages, several kinds of which are in use in Europea and are being introduced here. This will complete the improvement of our roads, and there will soon not only be steam or wapor propelled carriages and local freight wagons, but private carriages, which cost only 50 cents a week for the motive power per horse power.
