A sewer trap, about 500 yards farther down the street, was opened, and the body of the man was caught as he floated thru the trap. He was carried into the Roncesvalles car barns, and Drs. Duncan, Hart and Poynty were soon on the scene, but all efforts to resuscitate Weller were in vain. The gas in the sewer had been strong enough to asphyxiate him. It appears that the two men were laying a branch sewer and had cut a hole in the trunk to make a connection. The gas which immediately issued over-powered Weller and he fell thru the hole before his comrade could get as-
