It is of the greatest importance that our cheesemakers should remedy the above defects during the coming season, and not allow the quality of their goods to be second to that of States cheese after having gained such an enviable reputation in the British market. It is stated that these stiff-textured cheese, which are un-suitable to the trade, result from insufficient curing, which simply spoils the goods, and makes them so objectionable to consumers on the other side. It was stated in these columns repeatedly last season that cheese were being shipped from the factories in too green a state. It is a great mistake for factorymen to suppose that as long as they sell their cheese and system in the right direction themselves whether they are properly cured or not. Here are the evil results, however, manifested after many days, and the worst of it is that those factorymen who take the trouble and pains to cure their cheese properly have to share the blame to a certain extent of those who are responsible for the whole trouble. We hope this defect will be remedied during the coming season. As stated in these columns last season, the makers of both butter and cheese in the United States are making desperate efforts to excel them by their rivals.

important Speech by Hon. G. W. Ross -Canada Asked to Contribute to Imperial Defense.

Toronto, April 15.-The annual meetng of the Toronto branch of the British Empire League, which was held at Association Hall last night, was largely attended, and had as its distinctive note a deep imperialistic strain. The speeches of the evening had but one sentiment, that of closer relations within the empire, to be achieved chiefly by securing a preference for Canadian or other colonial products in the British market. The principal speech was made by Hon. George W. Ross, who looked forward hopefully to this concession, and advised Canadians to seek in a cautious, deliberative manner. His speech was a very able consideration of the whole matter. Col. Denison also contributed a spirited address to the speeches of the evening. The chair was occupied by the president, Dr. Larratt W. Smith, Q.C.

Speaking to the motion, Mr. Ross said that if a preference were given to Canadian products it would be a great incentive to Englishmen to migrate to Canada. It was not a question of trade, but a question of the unity, of the consolidation, of the empire. Mr. Ross declared that if the case were handled prudently and patiently, he was convinced that public opinion in Britain would be so changed that in the course of time they would hold the view now held by the British Empire League. (Applause.) He then read an extract from Sir Wilfrid Laurier's speech board of trade banquet, in which he said he would have been very foolish if he had rejected an offer of preferential to perform the share of work allotted trade if it had been placed before him. to him in the general scheme of battle, fought much more in Great Britain than in Canada. Sea Fight.

[From the New York Sun.] The quick-firing gun and high explosives have introduced so many new factors into warfare that we are not surprised that naval and military men in Europe are hoping for a conflict of natural conditions, such as the wind and the state of the sea, together with and those before them. The new methods and conditions have to be tested, and no one can venture to foretell results.

The ill-fated British admiral, Sir many and in some cases serious com-plications into naval warfare, they have, however, by no means obliter-ated the men. What they have done tle must remain with that side on which the machinery of all kinds, whether connected with the movements of the ships or the working of the armament, is the better in quality, which has been the better cared for, and with which the men and officers are the better acquainted, or, it might even be said, the more in sympathy.

These last considerations point to the conclusion that so far as it is possible there should be few changes in the personnel of modern ships of war once results from its use. I used they are put in commission. The commander of a ship going into action who knows his ship, his officers and crew, and the machinery with which he has can give his undivided attention to it, having no anxieties as to the manner in which they will all perform their particular functions. In a word, the more complete what the French call the rapport between all the elements, animate and inanimate, that go to make the modern warship an effective fighting machine, the surer is the side on which it exists in the higher degree to win the victory.
