

BURNS AND HIS FIGHTS NEXT WEEK TO AUSTRALIA

Aftermath of Battle With Squires in Paris—Frenchmen Are Enthusiastic.

On July 5 Tommy Burns sails for Sydney, Australia, where he will meet a fighter of repute named Laing. This battle is to take place during the latter part of August. The champion is on board training quarters fixed up on board ship, and says that he will win all the fights he comes home by way of the Pacific.

Tommy is getting $35,000 for three fights, $20,000 for the one with Laing and $7500 for each of the two other bouts with Australians.

Speaking of himself, Burns says that he never felt better, and is taking the very best care of himself. He neither drinks nor smokes. He anticipates clearing up considerable money on the Australian trip. After that he will be ready for Jack Johnson.

The London Sporting Life's Paris correspondent in his aftermath of the battle between Burns and Squires was still enthusiastic. The Australian made a great hit with the Parisians on account of his aggressiveness. He went to Burns until he tired. Now Paris boasts that it has witnessed a real big fight, for although Tommy Burns disposed of Bill Squires in eight rounds, a battle was during six of these bouts a battle waged with such pace, vigor and determination on both sides that all previous fights over there sink into comparative moderate affairs. From the point of view of the spectators, the fight was a great success. Burns was the first round with a series of blows on the head and ribs without a return, he at once won the respect of the judges.

Burns' work was the cleaner, and his style more taking. He, of course, set the pace, and Squires had to follow it and make the best of it. The champion's footwork was a feature good to look upon, and he was always in possession. In his favor it must be said, also, that he was chivalrous. In the second round Squires charged and Burns on one knee. Burns stretched forth his hand to help. The Australian was remarkably mobile, but in contrast to Burns, lacked composure and steadiness.

In point of hitting it may be safely stated that Squires did the more until the close. An exception might be made of the second round, when Squires, who had forced matters at a great rate in the latter portion of the first round, seemed to tire, and Burns had some advantage. But after this, until the seventh bout, when Squires again charged, Burns on the jaw and ribs, and it required the utmost address on the part of the latter to avoid championship swings which were having telling effect had they found their object.

Burns, in fact, was nonplussed up to the fifth round, and had he not modified his tactics by continually closing with his opponent to avoid the long-reaching blows another story might have been told. Burns was not only the more powerful, but he was also the more aggressive. No one on the European side of the Atlantic had seen Burns in an appeal for a fight, and he was a great favorite. But he just appeared sufficient to disconcerted after that critical round, for he made his friends anxious, and he inspired the French crowd, who were unacquainted with his resources, with the belief that the Australian champion punished in this bout, but he made several blows over Squires' head. The close saw the Australian hit him vigorously on the head and ribs. Burns staggered under one on the head, and the sound of the gong must have been like a siren to him. Burns was in the corner with less of that confident air so characteristic of him.

After this, however, Burns showed gradually increasing improvements. Squires continued occasionally to get home, but Burns hung on to him like a wrestler, parrying for a grip, and he was sending in innumerable hard drives from short range, which proved Squires' undoing. Continuing these tactics, Squires got little opportunity of again becoming dangerous, and herein Burns displayed his superiority. Squires' undoing came when he was dazed by a terrific blow near the head, finished him with one on the jaw, and was still world's champion.
