VERY APPROPRIATE. Mr. Peter Binks says he hopes the opposition will hold all their meetings here after in Fairland Hall, Mill Street. That, he says, is the proper place for fairy stories, and Mill Street is the proper place to grind them out.

A SIMPLE SOLUTION. Since the Standard was started, the other papers have been fairly busy responding to requests from indignant citizens to contradict stories printed in that sheet. It is suggested that a simpler method would be to let a standing announcement to that effect:—"If the Standard says so, it isn't so."

When Mr. Hiram Hornbeak, who was in town last evening, came out of an opposition meeting at a late hour he requested a policeman to accompany him to a hotel.

"I haint got much money on me," said Hiram, "but after listenin' to them fellers in there I won't take no chances. I don't 'pose the more'n three or four honest men in town—they're all lawyers. It beats all how we've degenerated since this fight begun. I'm gon' home on the fast train tomorra, to see how things is in the Settlement. It's awful."
