TURF. King Will Race 31 Horses. The season of 1914 was the most successful for King George since he followed ed in the footsteps of King Edward VII. in giving his patronage to the turf, and it may be pointed out, says a London paper, that he did the national sport and those dependent on it a real service when on the outbreak of the war, he signified his intention of going on with racing as usual and his wish that it should be continued despite the hesitating counsels put forward in some quarters.

For the campaign to be faced in 1915 Richard Marsh has a team of thirty-one under his care, all but the odd one being young ones. The English flat racing season of 1915 will begin as usual, at Lincoln, the opening day being March 22, though the steeplechase season overlaps a trifle.

Boxing Titles May Change Hands. Johnson May Lose Heavyweight — Welsh Has Many Stars on His Trail, and Middleweight Clash Should Produce New Chief last Johnson, owing to his lack of experience and a real fighting disposition. Johnson's real danger will come from the black fighters, "Sam" McVey and "Sam" Langford. The two "Sams" are still doing well, are much younger than Johnson and in the minds of most critics would probably outlast the champion.

It is considered a certainty that if Johnson fights all four of these men during the coming year, as he is arranging to do, he will lose his title. No champion of this generation has retained the title after thirty-seven years of age.

The present middleweight, title holder, "Al" McCoy No. 1, is just a joke. An accidental poke in the first round of a bout with George Chip at New York stopped Chip, then credited a championship aura, owing to two knockouts of Frank Klaus. McCoy has done nothing since to support his title claim and he'll be bested by three or four middle weights, Chip included, if he meets them.

Welsh is slowing with age and some "come" should take his measure if he comes out in the open. "Johnny" Kilbane seems to have the featherweight class all to himself. Of the upcoming crop George Chaney, Kayo Mars, "Benny" McGovern, "Cal" Delaney and others, none seems to rank with the Cleveland wonder. There is almost no chance of his defeat in a title bout.

"Kid Williams," alias John Gutenko, of Denmark and Baltimore, seems destined to retain his championship, although there is a chance that he will be squeezed outside the weight limit. Williams proved he could make the weight in a recent bout with Dally in New York city, but it takes work for him now. Twelve months more will see him in a class higher. Then watch out, "Johnny" Kilbane.

"Charley" Brandt, of Brooklyn, looks like the only boy able to go a route and hold his own with Williams. Brandt jumped in with two days' notice, worked off a lot of weight and held the championship to a near draw in ten rounds. Apparently he's our only timber out of which a successor to Williams might be made.

It was Josh Billings who said he had "seen some awful bad throat diseases completely cured in three days by simply joining a temperance society."

The province of Quebec has a total of 111,460,000 acres of land set aside as forest reserves. This total includes the National and Gaspé parks, in addition to twenty township forest reserves aggregating 267,000 acres.

"Mike" Gibbons will have the support of the east when he meets Clabby in Milwaukee. Undoubtedly these two men are entitled to first consideration.

Gibbons is a wonderfully strengthened and improved fighter since he came east three years ago. But there is no way of bringing these men together for comparison, except a ring encounter.

It appears that "Freddie" Welsh will have to be a wizard to retain his title another year, if he meets all opponents over a distance of ground. "Charley" White, "Joe" Shugrue, "Willie" Ritchie, Gilbert Gallant and "Johnny" Dundee are the boxers who seem to menace the champion most.
