Tomorrow Canadian Press HALIFAX, Jan. 3—The home-coming of Frank Burgess, the former Nova Scotia sealing captain, who was given up as dead 30 years ago, and who has since roamed the world, striving to re-construct the past while suffering from loss of memory, has been fixed for to-morrow morning selson Burgess, a counsin, left Burlington, Hants county, for Truro this afternoon, and tomor-row will accompany the wanderer to the home he built and furnished for the bride he was to wed in New South the bride he was to wed in New South Wales on his last sealing trip in the early nineties. Awaiting him will be his 80-year-old mother, Mrs. Jessie Reynolds. A chance blow on the head while engaged in lumbering within easy reach of his old home, proved the open sesame for which he had been searching. It is something over thirty years ago since Frank Burgess, captain of a sealing schooner sailed away from Nova Scotia. He was 24 years old and was bound for the southern seas on two missions, to find seals, and to marry a New South Wales girl he had met on a previous sealing trip. Be-fore he left, he had fitted up the home for his bride.
