SPECULATIONS AS TO THE WHERE-ABOUTS OF THE ENGLISH EXPLORATION PARTY IN THE ARCTIC REGION.
(From the London Telegraph.) When the two vessels were last seen open water lay before them, and they were bearing straight up northward for Frudde Land and Cape Isabella.
The season was in all respects eminently favorable, and there was every reason for hoping that a very high latitude would be reached. Unfortunately, as the recent voyage of the Pandora abundantly demonstrates, there is nothing more treacherous than Arctic seas, and a piece of ice in the morning there may be a fresh rolling sea, without a glint of ice, and a water sky stretching round the stomachic distaste already in process of obliteration. The fog is perfectly black, but otherwise unchanged.

Our Militia.
REGULATIONS FOR THE ANNUAL DRILL
OF 1876-77 DOMINION OF CANADA.
In order to bring the expenditure for drill and training the Active Militia, for the years 1876-7, within the appropriation made by Parliament, the strength of the force to be drilled and paid for that year, has been limited by Order in Council, to 23,000 officers, non-commissioned officers and men, and 1,420 horses, for a period of not less than eight days.
As the nominal strength of the Active Militia is in excess of the number which can be paid, and as it is not desirable to reduce the strength of corps below that established for the drill and training of the year 1875-76, viz: 23,000 non-commissioned officers and men, including staff sergeants and bandsmen—provision has been made for the selection by lot of the corps which will drill in the different districts—each district being allotted its full quota in proportion to the total strength of all the corps therein.
The annual drill of all corps (except Field Batteries of Artillery authorized for that purpose, and the same may be carried out in any such cases, no allowances will be made for rations or forage, and the pay will be for officers, one dollar, and for non-commissioned officers and men, fifty cents per diem.
The maximum number of officers, non-commissioned officers and men, and horses to be received for drill in each district will be—

In the selections from corps for drill, Field Batteries of Artillery are first taken, then the number required to complete the quota is deduced, it is to be made up from corps of the other arms, in proportion to the strength of each.

The Deputy Adjutant General in each district will see that the expenditure for drill is kept within the appropriation, and to that end, in all such
per diem.

A story comes to us from the Western district on the details of which a Bret Harte or a Colonel John Hay might have found a theme. The other day a gang of laborers were employed in stacking blocks of stone on a permanent way of the Great Western Railroad, between Keynsham and Bristol. In fact, the operation of stone stacking was carried on within a few yards of the Brislington Tunnel.
It was at the time of day when the most wonderful express train in the world, called the "Flying Dutchman," was expected, and by some unlucky accident a large block of stone rolled down the embankment and lodged on the roof of the "Flying Dutchman" was heard in the tunnel. There was not a moment to be lost, so swiftly down hundreds of innocent lives or perish in the attempt. He had a wife and family at home, but he never thought of them. His life was in his hand, but he never thought of that. Down the embankment sped the brave fellow, served with the combined strength of Sisyphus and Atlas to move the stone and save his fellow-countrymen. "Quick, for your life," he shouted to the companions on the bank. "Alas! it was just too late; the stone was rolled over the way, but the hero was cut to pieces by the tangs of the murderous train. This is as grand a noble story as ever was told. It is finer than the tale of "Jin Bludo," the moral of whose story is told with such impetuous vigor and truth by the author of "Little Breecches."

He knew his duty, a dead sure thing, And Christ said, "Go ye into the world, On a man that died for men!" If ever there was a brave fellow who laid down his life for the sake of his fellow-creatures, it was this hero of the Brislington Tunnel. His wife and children ought to be looked after, and have no doubt, come under the consideration of the citizens of Bristol. But the story ought to live for ever.—London Echo.

A Remarkable Surgical Operation.
About two years ago, a waiter in a Parisian restaurant undertook to introduce the feast of the Chinese new year, by introducing a fork, handle foremost, into his throat, taking care to hold the tines in his teeth.
The attempt was successful, and a repetition was demanded by the loung-ers in the saloon. The man compliantly acceded to the demand, and he performed the feat with a fork in his mouth, and down it went. The pain was intense. A physician was summoned, who managed to seize the fork with a forceps; but just as he was drawing it up, the patient was seized with convulsive coughing, the doctor was compelled to relax his hold, and the fork slipped down all the way to the stomach. The symptoms of asphyxia at once disappeared, and the man suffered no inconvenience or pain about two weeks. At the end of that time, however, severe gastric affections manifested themselves, and the patient was sent to an hospital, where he has since, until last month, remained suffering great agony.

In the month of October last, it was decided by the hospital physicians to precipitate the extraordinary operation of gastrostomy, that is, to cut directly into the stomach and extract the obstacle. It was at first attempted to determine adhesions of the viscera from out, upwards, by means of catheters; but this not succeeding, a triangular zone, wherein no essential organs were included, was selected as the point of perforation. On April the incision was made, the layers of tissue being dissected away one after another. The envelope of the stomach was attained, cut, and a piece removed. The stomach itself was then opened, and pinners introduced; and after a few attempts, the fork was grasped and withdrawn. The wound was closed, and is now nearly healed, the patient suffering only from a slight
of obliteration. The fork is perfectly black, but otherwise unchanged.

Does it Pay to be Surly.
It was only one customer the early man snubbed. The customer asked for ten cents' worth of wire. The surly man said something to him about the trouble of cutting off so much piece, and sneered at him for being so small a customer. He cut it off from the roll, and pushed it to the next customer, who had a good deal more intended to buy some hinges and bolts, and two or three locks, which might have amounted in all to five dollars. The surly man did not even bid him good day. That one customer seemed a very small affair to the dealer, because the customer of a stock such a limited amount of merchandise may be the larger customer of to-morrow. He forgot that the man who is shabbily treated will not return to him, unless for some reason, and if he forgets that a man does not ask in one breath for all he wants. He forgot that the small customer of to-day
