

Iron shipbuilders appear to be really becoming an important branch of industry in Denmark. Although for the last fifteen years small iron vessels, designed for trading between the various Baltic ports, have been built at Copenhagen, it is only recently that the construction of large steamers has been attempted. At present several of one thousand tons are being built, and one of these, it is stated, will be employed in laying down the telegraph cable between China and Japan. Two steamers, each of nearly nine hundred tons—the "Rolf" and the "Thorvaldsen"—lately made the passage to New York, and these are said to be the first iron vessels built in Denmark which have ever entered that port.

"Sam," said one little youngster to another, "Sam, does your schoolmaster ever give you any rewards of merit?" "I suppose he does," was the rejoinder; "he gives me a lickin' regularly every day and says I merit two."

"Why doesn't your father take a newspaper?" asked a man of a little boy whom he found pilfering one from his doorstep. "Cause he'd rather send me to take it," was the reply.
