ALBERT THE GOOD (PRINCE CONSORT).

By W. J. WINTLE. Third Edition. [Tenth Thousand.

"A bright and refreshing book, admirably worded and well illustrated."—Civil Service Gazette.

"Remarkably concise and complete."—Dundee Courier.

"In condensed and brief style, gives an excellent résumé of the Prince's life—a life that will always be remembered as one of the brightest and best."—Midland Free Press.

"The author has done his work admirably."—Nottingham Guardian.

ALEXANDER MACKAY, Missionary Hero of Uganda.

By the Author of "The Story of Stanley." With an Introduction by Rev. C. T. WILSON (Church Missionary Society), one of the Original Missionaries to Uganda. Sixth Edition.

[Thirty-third Thousand.

This is a complete though brief biography of the young Christian hero whose name must for ever be gloriously linked with the story of Africa. As a history of patient heroism, Christian gentleness, and indomitable courage and perseverance in the face of immense difficulties, it is just the thing to touch the imagination of boyhood and to leave an indelible impression for good.

DAVID LIVINGSTONE: Weaver-Boy, Missionary, Explorer.

By B. K. GREGORY. Fifth Edition. [Twentieth Thousand.

"Admirably comprehensive, and should inscribe afresh in many youthful minds the lessons of Dr. Livingstone's wonderful career."—Christian.

"A bright and engaging little work, written in a strong, simple, and direct style."—School Board Chronicle.

"We do not know where we could obtain a better book for young people, and especially boys, at the price."—Methodist Times.

JOHN HORDEN, Missionary Bishop.

By Rev. A. R. BUCKLAND, M.A., Author of "The Heroic in Missions." Third Edition. [Sixteenth Thousand.

Boys should be especially interested in this story of missionary enterprise in the "Far West," on the shores of Hudson's Bay. Horden's Diocese measured some fifteen hundred miles across, with about three thousand miles of coast, and his labours among Indians and Eskimo form a story full of interest and full of stimulus.
