SAVE YOUR OWN SEED.—Every intelligent tiller of the soil will admit that "whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." If one sows of plants inferior seed, he cannot expect a bountiful crop of either roots or grain. Small and half-matured kernels of wheat, oats, rye and corn cannot be expected to yield large panicles and ears filled with plump and heavy kernels. If one plants the seeds of carrots, parsnips, turnips and cabbage which grew in small pods and the half-matured panicles on the slender stems, he cannot produce large roots, even if the soil has been brought to an excellent state of fertility. This suggests the great importance of raising seed of the choicest quality. It will cost no more to raise one thousand bushels of beets or turnips, per acre, than three hundred, if plump and heavy seed has been properly saved. In order to produce large, heavy seed of garden vegetables, select a few large carrots, a few turnips, parsnips and beets, and plant them in rich soil early in the growing season. They should be planted about thirty inches apart, that the tops may have ample room to spread. When the blossoms begin to appear, clip off all the small side branches, leaving only four or five central stocks, which will yield seed of a much better quality than one can usually purchase. Every kernel of such seed, when planted, will produce a large root. Turnips and carrots may grow in close proximity; but turnips and carrots designed for seed should be transplanted several rods apart. One cabbage will yield as much seed as one family will care to plant, unless a crop is grown for market. A super head should be transplanted as it grew. The top of the head should be cut open, so that sprouts or seed-stalk may readily spring up through the centre. As soon as the panicles of carrots and parsnips begin to turn brown, and when the pods of cabbage and turnips begin to lose their green color, let the stalks be cut off close to the ground and hung up in some out-building. When the pods, leaves and stems are quite dry, let them be spread on a clean floor, or on a large blanket, and the seed threshed either with a flail or by crushing the pods with one's feet.
