WATCH CHAINS AND CUFF LINKS

London, Sept. 26.—A West End jeweller says that two things seem to be passing out of fashion—watch chains and cuff links. Both these articles were, on the whole, before the war, but wrist watches, being essential for officers brought them quickly to the fore, and civilians have been rushing to buy them, in many instances selling their watches and chains to buy the handier timepieces. So with the links. The soft double cuff, which was such a nuisance to get them into, began their downfall and then khaki shirts made to button at the wrist completed it. Now one sees even the best dressed men with shirt cuffs buttoned at the wrist and the links are put away in the drawer with the "has-beens."
