LONELY NEW ZEALAND.

The Colony Net Altogether a Paradise—Vast Stretches of Vacant Land.

As nothing in Europe astonishes the New Zealander as much as the crowds, so nothing in New Zealand is so surprising to the Englishman as the vast stretches of uninhabited land.

Even the tourists on the coach-roads may easily travel twenty miles without seeing a single house, says a writer in Macmillan's Magazine. On the road leading to one of the most popular resorts of the North Island, along fifty miles of highway there is but one small inn where the horses are changed, and one Maori village with a solitary white teacher for its school. The rest is scrub or swamp where wild horses roam, or cleared bush where blackened stumps still stand, or fern-land with patches of rough pasture.

And to reach the far-famed lakes of the South Island, beautiful enough when they are reached, the coach-tolls for two whole days through inches of dust or mud, according to the season, dragging its slow way past miles of seeming desert where even the yellow tussock-grass is supplanted by things or by patches of green lichen resembling nothing so much as verdigris.

In New Zealand they appraise land by the number of sheep it will carry, and this is five or six acres to a sheep, and a merino sheep into the bargain.

The driver, as he passes, flings out letter-bags at the little wayside post-offices, or tucks them into wooden boxes perched by the highway. In this way the post is delivered twice, or possibly thrice, a week in summer, and once in winter. But this is along the main roads; any map will show how few they are, and even they are often impassable for wheeled traffic in winter. Then the post cart, sunk to its axles, lurches along at the rate of two miles an hour, or the postman rides in mud up to his horse's girth, or the horse who has business abroad do likewise, or wait at home for better weather.

Luckily, in no part of New Zealand are the winters so long and so severe as in England; but metal for road-making is scarce in New Zealand, and labor is scarcer and dearer. When it is scarce, it is scarce, and the cost of the fifty years or so that it has been done in, the wonder is, not that the roads are bad, but that there are so many roads of any kind.

The newcomer, however, does not think of that. Probably he knows nothing of the sorry history of the land he proposes to adopt. When he turned his back on England it never occurred to him that there the loneliest farm in the most remote district is in the centre of a crowd as compared with many of the isolated settlements where he has been loaded himself. To be only eight or ten miles from the nearest town, or from any sort of a church, is to be a fortunate exception.

On many big runs, which years of soil have gone to make, all the winter's stock is housed not later than April, because when the rains come only an ox, a day or a pack-horse can travel along the road to the town, and that with difficulty; and the storekeepers must bring all their wares from the nearest railway station, and most seasons there are special breaks, standing out of their money for months, or else they must suffer the loss of oxen and horses bogged or exhausted with the heavy winter's work.

No wonder store goods are dear. "Foot deep and four foot wide," is the familiar description of roads in "the roadless north," which has a pre-eminently evil reputation in that way; but even in the old settlements southwards walking is often out of the question, not only because there is nowhere to go when the rain comes, but also because of the roads and the unbridled rivers. Nor is that the worst that can befall, for in many districts even yet there are no roads, only bridle-paths, or foot-tracks ending at the water's edge, whence a boat can be rowed to the nearest port of call for coaling steamers.

Fruit at Cape Town.

A correspondent in Cape Town in writing to a friend in Toronto about the fruit inspection by the Government officers in Cape Colony, states: "I saw the Cape Colony Government officers inspecting the fruit that they were just shipping to the London market. My, but I wish our Canadian fruit packers could see the way the fruit here is put up for export. It would be an object lesson for them. But the disadvantage that all the colonies are under is that when the fruit reaches the market it is sold. I was telling the people here that if all the colonies could join in the erection of a commodious cold storage warehouse in London, and then put their fruit and perishables on the market from time to time, just in sufficient quantities to meet the demand. It would mean millions to the colonies in the long run. As it is, the arrival of a fair shipment means a glut in the hand to mouth existence in the London market, and, of course, a marked decline in the prices. Under such circumstances as I suggest the colonial fruit trade between the colonies and Great Britain would always be a sure thing, and not at all subject to the uncertain conditions that now prevail. Apart from the great advantage to the colonies, considering that none of the colonies would enter into competition with any one of the others. The different seasons between Canada, South Africa and Australia would give each the control of the market in its own season. I would not have the fruit business than all the gold mines in the country."

Conspirators in His Personal Escort—Plot Deep Laid.

St. Petersburg, May 18.—Further details of the plot at Tsarskoye-Selo against the life of His Majesty the Emperor indicate that his escape during the Russian Revolution was very narrow. The plot was deep laid away all the conspirators were members of the Emperor's personal escort. The arrest of one man, a Cossack sergeant, has made it possible to trace the conspiracy back for four months, and shows preparations were being made on the second of February.

Body Found in River.

Guelph, May 20.—The body of Michael Hart, a well-to-do farmer, about 68 years of age, residing two and a half miles from the city, was discovered Saturday floating in the River Speed in front of the C. P. R. passenger station. This was in the opposite direction from his way home.

He leaves a widow and a son. They took no notice of his absence from home, as he often stopped away. He was soon in the city two nights ago.

Mr. James Gaston, merchant, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., writes, "For nine years I have been disfigured with Tetters on my hands and face. At last I have found a cure in Dr. Agnew's Ointment. It helped me from the first application, and now I am permanently cured."

Immigrants Protest.

Fort William, May 20.—A number of schoolmen are petitioning His Majesty the King, protesting against what they term the deceitful methods employed by agents in the old country in securing immigrants for the west.

They state that very bad treatment was accorded several contingent, who were given very poor accommodation, paid less than contract wages and were forced at last to throw up their jobs.

The Government immigration office at Port Arthur denies the story that Englishmen are being discriminated against.

The mother who would be horrified at the thought of letting her daughter wander away to a strange country without guide or counsel, yet permits her to enter that unknown land of womanhood without counsel or caution. Then, in utter ignorance, the maiden must meet physical problems whose solution will effect her whole future life. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has been well named a "God-send to women." It corrects irregularities and imparts such vigorous vitality to the delicate womanly organs, as fits them for their important functions. Many a nervous, hysterical, peevish girl has been changed to a happy young woman after the use of "Favorite Prescription" has established the sound health of the organs peculiarly feminine.

Not a patent medicine, but the "Favorite Prescription" of Dr. R. V. Pierce, a Specialist in the diseases of women. Of known composition, without alcohol or other dangerous stimulants, the active medicinal principles of Golden Seal and Lady's Slipper root, of Black Cohosh root, of Union root and Blue Cohosh root are extracted from each by the use of chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine.
