

HERE AND THERE.

Embroidered Frocks For Little Girls.
Colored Vests "Out."
Embroidered frocks for little girls are especially smart this winter and will be much worn for afternoon parties and special occasions. These costumes, though made of fine batiste or linen, are not too cold for use, because they are worn over white or colored silk slips. In all over eyelet embroidery they are most attractive.

Colored mesh veils to match the hat or gown have quite gone out, so that again we have the black veil in all its glory in innumerable cobweb designs adorned with chenille and velvet dots of all possible and many impossible sizes. The only colored veils that have survived are the brown single thread mesh with a single tiny dot on every cross thread. These brown veils are worn with brows, with most shades of red and with the majority of light colored felt and velvet hats. Gray is unquestionably the shade of the winter, but the blues and delicate shades of pink are also much in demand. Bright red and deep claret are popular, but the colorings in between are smart in cloth, although there are many very deep red velvets that are exceedingly handsome.

No sleeping garment gives quite the comfort on a cold winter night that is to be found in the gown of flannel or flannelette. The gown in its form is so plain and simple that it suits both materials admirably, while it is thoroughly comfortable and satisfactory to the wearer.

MILLINERY MATTERS.

Light Hats Much Worn—Grapes as Artistic Garniture.

An unusual number of light hats are worn this season, beavers and felts in white, pink and champagne, as well as hats of gold and cloth of silver. A creation of cloth of silver with white grapes and silver ribbon bows is a frosty suggestion, but exceedingly pleasant when set off by a clear complexion, rosy cheeks and dark hair.

Moire silk sailor hats are pretty made with an underbrim of velvet. A smart model in dark forest green trimmed with a pair of long pointed wings coming from a stiff bow of ribbon at the side is very effective.

Faded ribbon is used very much this season as a trimming for children's hats. It is serviceable and always looks smart and has the additional merit of going further than plain ribbon, and beyond a gold buckle perhaps no other trimming is necessary to the success of the hat. A handsome bow tied at the counter of a department shop or millinery store, with a short length for twisting around the crown, can be arranged by any person who knows how to sew, the process being only a matter of a few minutes.

Simple afternoon gowns are being made from such materials as cashmere, velveteen and henrietta. The dress illustrated is of the latter fabric. The bodice is scarcely more elaborate than a shirt waist. Still it gives the effect of something very dressy. The skirt is seven gored and trimmed with circular frills of the material finished with bands of velvet.

The Inquiry At Belleville.

Belleville, Feb. 14.—The investigation into alleged irregularities at the Deaf and Dumb Institute is now going on through Russell Snow of Toronto. The complainant is a Mrs. Graham of Peterboro, who, previous to Mr. Mathison's going away, alleged that her child at the institute was given insufficient and improper food; that certain teachers were unduly harsh to pupils and that the proper methods of oral instruction were not used.

$100 REWARD $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for each case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

IT IMPARTS STRENGTH.

Just think of the enormous strengthening power Ferrozone possesses—consider what it did for H. V. Potter, well known in Kingston. "I was subject to spells of dizziness. For eight months I had intense pain in my right side between the shoulder and hip. I was almost insupportable with weakness and lack of vigor. Often I scarcely ate any breakfast and felt miserable all day. Nervous, easily excited, troubled with heart weakness, I was in bad shape. Ferrozone restored and nourished me back to health in short order." Whatever your weakness may be Ferrozone will cure. Price 50c. per box at all dealers.

THEY ALL FAILED.

Many have tried to devise a corn cure equal to Putnam's, but after fifty years nothing has come upon the market that so painlessly cures corns and warts. Don't experiment, use the best, and that's "Putnam's."

Fine feathers may not make fine birds, but they make fine bonnets.

BOSTON'S LACK OF HUMOR.

An English View of the Landmarks of the "Hub."

I have said that Boston loves relics. The relics which it loves best are the relics of England's discomfiture. The stately portraits of Copley are of small account compared to the memorials of what was nothing else than a civil war. Faneuil hall, the Covent Garden of Boston, presented to the city by Peter Faneuil some thirty years before the birth of "liberty," is now but an emblem of revolt. The Old South meeting place is endeared to the citizens of Boston as "the sanctuary of freedom." A vast monument, erected a mere quarter of a century ago, commemorates the "Boston massacre." And wherever you turn you are reminded of an episode which might easily be forgotten. To an Englishman these historical landmarks are uninteresting. The dispute which they recall aroused far less emotion on our side of the ocean than on the other, and long ago we saw the events of the Revolution in a fair perspective. In truth, this insistence on the past is not wholly creditable to Boston's sense of humor. The passionate paeans which Otis and his friends sang to liberty were irrelevant. Liberty was never for a moment in danger, if liberty, indeed, be a thing of fact and not of watchwords. The leaders of the Revolution wrote and spoke as though it was their duty to throw off the yoke of the foreigner—a yoke as heavy as that which Catholic Spain cast upon Protestant Holland. But there was no yoke to be thrown off, because no yoke was ever imposed, and Boston might have celebrated greater events in her history than that which an American statesman has wisely called "the glittering and sounding generalities of natural right."—Charles Whitley in Blackwood's Magazine.

IMITATIVE WOMAN.

A Cynical English View of Feminine Human Nature.

Decidedly women are an imitative class. From her earliest age the small girl apes the doings of her elders and, had she her own way, would be a miniature epitome of fashion. Such entertainments as she is permitted to witness in her mother's drawing room she imitates, with dolls and nurses for company, in the nursery. In her school days she invariably "forms" herself on some special friend whom she elects as a model of feminine perfection. And at a certain stage of her lives girls are as much alike as peas in a pod. As they mature and develop they may perhaps show some signs of individuality, but in all the main issues of life they continue to be more imitative than original.

Fashions, housekeeping and entertaining are all more or less conducted on the same lines, and the only true sign of friendship that is shown to the young married woman is to beg her to order her life and her home on her friend's principles. Any departure from those principles or any symptom of individual taste or strength of mind will sound the first challenge to her mother and her mother's friends will alike desire imitation of their methods as the "sincerest form of flattery," and every decline from the original system will be pronounced wrong or injudicious.—Rita in London Mail.

Too Rapid Growth.

The minister's six-year-old son is of a very critical, literal turn of mind, and his father's sermons sometimes puzzle him sorely. He regards his father as the embodiment of truth and wisdom, but he has difficulty in harmonizing the dominion's pulpit utterances with the world as it really is. His parents encourage him to express his opinions and clear up his doubts as much as possible. So one Sunday at dinner, after a long period of thought, they were not surprised when he said gravely, "Papa, you said one thing in your sermon today that I don't think is so at all."

"Well, what's that, my boy?" asked the clergyman.

"Why, papa, you said 'The boy of today is the man of tomorrow.' That's too soon."

Incredulous.

"Cousin Henry's seasickness that time he crossed the water must have touched his head a bit."

"Why so?"

"Well, here he wrote in his diary: 'Jan. 14.—Most everybody seasick, including myself. Saw two spoutin' whales.'"

"Don't see anything very loony about that."

"Why, Abner Dobbs! Do you mean to tell me that you believe that any of them passengers had ever swallowed a whale?"—Life.

British Military Inventions.

The war office has long been proverbial for its discouragement of inventions in general, but they seem to reserve a special brand of ill treatment for an inventor who is unlucky enough to wear a soldier's coat. General Shrapnell, the inventor of the formidable projectile which bears his name to this day, died a poor man after spending thousands of pounds on his invention.—London Regiment.

Nothing is impossible to the man who can will.—Mirabeau.

PRIZES FOR RESEARCH.

Late Aeneas McCharles of Sudbury Leaves $10,000 to University.

A few days ago it was announced by Hon. Mr. Matheson, Provincial Treasurer, that the late Aeneas McCharles of Sudbury has bequeathed to the University of Toronto $10,000 of Ontario Government bonds, the interest to be used in giving prizes for the best results in scientific research. The clauses relating to the bequest provide:

To any Canadian, whether a student or not, who invents or discovers any new and improved process for the treatment of Canadian ores or minerals of any kind, after such process has been proved to be of special merit, on a practical scale.

Or for any important discovery, invention or development by any Canadian, which will lessen the dangers and loss of life in connection with the use of electricity in supplying power and light.

Or for any marked public distinction achieved by any Canadian in scientific research in any useful and practical line.

Newfoundland's Medical Needs.

That all the need of the Newfoundland fisheries has not been met by the work of Dr. Grenfell, wide as that work is, is shown by the following paragraph from The Newfoundland Western Star: "The number of cases of sickness this year among the fishermen of Bay of Islands, and the death of one of their number, forcibly backs up our contention that a qualified medical man should be stationed among the fishing fleet during the herring season, and for the erection and maintenance of a hospital in this N. B. and, one time chief secretary for Ireland, raised the Irish question, and Augustine Birrell, the present chief secretary, replied that he, like Premier Campbell-Bannerman, was perfectly satisfied that the only solution satisfactory to the great majority of the Irish people was what is generally called the Home Rule Bill. This statement was greeted with loud ministerial and nationalist cheers.

An I. C. R. Man.

T. C. Burpee, engineer of maintenance of way on the Intercolonial Railway, was born in 1852 at Sheffield, N. B., and has been in the railroad business practically all his life. In 1875 he entered the employ of the New Brunswick Railway as chairman. He became levelman a year later, and in 1881 found him redman on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul. After two years he was back in the east again, first as rodman on the Intercolonial and then as assistant engineer on the maintenance of way of the New Brunswick Railway. The C. P. R. claimed him next, and Mr. Burpee spent the years from 1887 to 1890 as assistant engineer of the company's eastern lines. In 1890 he joined the staff of the Bangor & Aroostook road, holding various positions from transit man up to assistant engineer of construction. It was in 1897 that Mr. Burpee entered the employ of the Canadian Government as assistant engineer of canal construction at Cardinal, Ont. The same year he was made chief assistant engineer of the Intercolonial and was appointed to his present position in July, 1899.

Retort On Dr. Gilmour.

A story against himself is told by Dr. Gilmour, warden of the Central Prison, Toronto.

Dr. Gilmour was talking to a meeting on "Crime" at the Salvation Army Temple on a recent Saturday night and regaled his audience with this story:

"A father wishing to inculcate truthfulness, told his son that the way to Heaven was a long, toilsome staircase, upon the steps of which every traveler made a chalk mark each time he told a lie.

"Next day the son told him he dreamed he was climbing the heavenly stair, and when about one-third of the way up met his father coming down."

"Where are you going, Pa?" said he.

"I am going for more chalk," was the reply."

As soon as Dr. Gilmour gave the paternal answer a leary individual rose in the audience and shouted:

"Doc, I will send you a barrelful. That's what you need."

Oldest Tree In the World.

What is supposed to be the oldest tree in the world is still standing in Ceylon. Its age is given as about 2,200 years. About 300 B. C. there was brought to Ceylon a branch of the tree under which the Buddha Gautama sat when he attained Buddhahood. The tree, which now has the distinction of being the oldest in the world, is the growth of that branch. Greatly revered by the pilgrims, it has a temple erected in its honor. Through centuries it has been respected and spared by all. During its lifetime most of the world's history has been made. It was already old when Christ brought His message to the world.

A Swindle.

Old Farmer—No, I don't want any more of your loan saving machines. I've tried enough on 'em. Look in there. There's a typewriting machine the missus spent all her egg and butter money on to buy for me 'cause I ain't so over handy with the pen. Just look at the swindle.

Friend—What's the matter with it? Old Farmer—Matter? Why, you can't even write your name with the bloomin' thing unless you know how to play the pianer.—London Telegraph.

Prescription By Pigeon.

Carrier pigeons are put to novel use in a thinly settled district in the north of Scotland. On long rounds a doctor takes several pigeons with him, and when a prescription is to be filled at once he sends a message to his surgery, where an attendant prepares and forwards the medicine. If a patient is liable to need an extra call a pigeon is left to send for the doctor.

Two Kinds of Corn That Once Grew In Georgia

JUDGE JOHN M. DOOLY of Georgia was noted for his wit and the ability of always having a better story ready than any "whopper" he might be told by a friend. The year 1813 was an exceptionally dry season in Georgia, and corn did not mature at all in many portions of the state.

"I have got the corn, Judge Dooly, that will stand this drought or any other one," said Austin Edwards one day while they were discussing the poor crops. "I got it from a Tennessee cattleman and planted a piece of it in my garden. It came up in about a week, and every stalk had six large ears, and hanging to the tassels was a nice little gourd full of shelled corn. It beats the Dutch, judge. Did you ever hear of anything like that?"

The judge listened with great gravity and when he had finished said: "Why, Mr. Austin, that isn't a shade to the corn made by Tom Haynes of Hancock county. I was at court there last week and stayed with Tom. He had just finished gathering in a piece of low swamp land which he cleared last year. Do you know it never rained on that piece of land at all, and Tom didn't expect there was going to be any corn, so he turned his hogs in to eat up the dry stalks. The hogs did not come back as usual the next morning, so he went to look after them. What was his surprise to find one of them with a large ear of corn in her mouth. He could not imagine where it came from, but on examination found that she had rooted it up from the foot of a dried cornstalk. He looked at other cornstalks and found that on the roots of all of them there were from five to ten large ears of corn. Then he had his field dug up and gathered the best crop he ever had."

"Well, well," said Austin. "That beats my corn. I must have some of that seed."—St. Louis Republic.

He Got Off Easy.

An elderly dandy, in Georgia was charged with the theft of some chickens. The negro had the misfortune to be defended by a young and inexperienced attorney, although it is doubtful whether any one could have secured his acquittal, the commission of the crime having been proved beyond all doubt.

The prisoner received a pretty severe sentence. "Thank you, sah," said he cheerfully, addressing the judge when the sentence had been announced. "Dat's mighty hard, sah, but it ain't anywhere near what I expected. I thought, sah, dat between mah character and dat speech of mah lawyer dat you'd hang me shore."—Philadelphia Ledger.

It's an Ill Wind.

"Well, Parker, how do you do? I hear that your missus has joined the suffragettes. You have my sincere sympathy."

'Twas but a golden heart, dear friend, Enamelled with a bit of blue. Which for repairs I had to send. And it returned as good as new.—Lurana W. Sheldon in New York Times
