FEARED INVASION

Exciting Days in Western Ontario During Fenian Raids.

Notwithstanding the bloodless character of the Fenian Raids, as compared with the terrible struggle that was just closed in Europe, there was really more excitement in Goderich and surrounding country in 1866 than there was in 1914. There was the chance that Goderich itself might be an objective of the invaders, and warlike preparations were made accordingly, says Wm. Swaffield in the Toronto Star Weekly.

For about six weeks after the commencement of hostilities in 1866 business of all kinds in Goderich and its surroundings was at a standstill. I well remember when I donned the badge of Home Guard and night and day tramped up and down to the harbor, where trouble might first have been expected if the invaders reached our shores. The garrison consisted of an artillery company, a rifle company and an infantry company, and these were reinforced by the "fighting Irishmen" from Goderich Township and the adjoining country.

The band bakery, opposite the present Park House, was taken over as the guard-room, and rifle pits were constructed along the lake bank, opposite the residence now occupied by G. M. Elliott. The pits had men stationed in them at all times, night and day. Down below on the docks bar, opposite the wharf, was a "battery," and every precaution of defence was taken.

They were all ready to shoot, when the look-outs announced that a steamer had sighted on the lake. Excitement prevailed, and the men of the garrison at the harbor and the riflemen on the bank were prepared for action. The look-out indicated whether the vessel was friend or foe, and with the utmost bravado she reached the inner basin.

Then, when another moment might have meant her destruction, she unfurled the American flag. It turned out to be the United States Government ship Michigan with Gen. Sherman aboard.

The posting of sentries along the lake was continued after this incident. I was with a company which had a post further around the lake bank than the present Hotel Sumner. One day about day-break a groundhog or some such animal started a sentry as it moved along the bank, and the sentry shot it, alarming the rest of the guard. At one time word that the enemy had left Chicago, en route to Goderich. At another time it was given out that a number of Fenians had left Port Huron for Goderich. The news spread like wildfire. As I was acquainted with places along the lake shore where an attempt might be made to land, I started out in the night with a party of Fenians. They in turn warned other residents along the Bayfield road. About this time however, word was given that the Fenians had been routed and had fled to the north.

Not all of them had fled, however. Some of the Fenians had joined the company, as it marched along, his only weapon being a pitchfork.

Some of the people went through the Fenian line, and the few survivors of those times know how to feel for war sufferers. One man took his cow and his pig and hid them in the highlands of Colborne Township. Another man between Goderich and Bayfield made a supply of panes for the Fenians. Many others hid their valuables.

Oxygen for Fenians.
At high levels, such as bird's nest, nowadays often reach. "It is no thing that the aviator literally 'lives his breath.'" He is in danger of collapse from this cause.

It was ascertained during the war, though not at first suspected, that the Fenians were really unable to fly at altitudes ordinarily required in the work they were required to perform.

It was further determined that more than 60 per cent of them could not endure flight at extremely high levels. But on the other hand, certain men were perhaps seven or eight out of 100 passed candidates, were able to ascend to the greatest elevations without peril.

To help in solving this important problem an oxygen apparatus was developed, smaller than the kind used for mine-rescue work, but constructed on much the same principle. Equipped with this contrivance, and supplied with liquid oxygen along with him, the aviator could skim along in safety through the upper reaches of the sky.

Yes, Could Tell Him.
A member of Parliament called another an ass in the sacred precincts of the House. Unparliamentary language being forbidden, the offending member was required to apologize and withdraw his statement. He didn't like doing it. "I withdraw," he said very stiffly, "but I maintain that the honorable member is an ass." "How can I get out of order?" asked the other man heatedly. "Probably a veterinary surgeon could tell you," was the retort.

Not So Bull for Fenians.
In Western Canada they are telling this story about the Prince of Wales. Some one was complimenting him upon the fact that he had set up his own bachelor establishment in London.

"Yes," said the prince, "it's been quite a bit of a job in London, creating an establishment for my own use, and I'm sorry to say that I'm not yet settled in it."

Could Not Sleep

Mr. Earnest Clark, Police Officer, 338 King St., Kingston, Ont., writes:

"For three years I suffered from nervousness and sleeplessness. I believe my condition was brought about by overwork. I had frequent headaches, neuritic pains and twitching of nerves and muscles. I had indigestion, was short of breath and easily tired. I commenced a treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and seven boxes of this medicine cured me of all my symptoms. I am now feeling one hundred per cent better than I was, and have to thank Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for the good health I am now enjoying."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, for $2.75, all dealers, or Edman, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

It's fine to have credit.

"Yes, but it's better never to have to ask for it."

The Actress.
She started on a farewell tour. The tickets didn't sell. She didn't fare so well.

Beginning at the Bottom.
"Many a man has attained success by beginning at the bottom."
"That's what Three-Fingered Sam did," remarked Cactus Joe. "He had all the money in Crimison Gulch before we took notice that he was dealing' of the bottom of the deck."

The Advantage.
"All freight trains should be vestibuled."
"Why so?"
"Because vestibules ought to make good hauls."
