CHAPTER VII.

Dulcie looks up with a smile.

"I am not too tired," she replies; "I never am tired. And I should be very glad, but—I can't play a note."

Silence again—broken by Maud's soft voice, in which horror is carefully concealed.

"Don't you care for music?"

"Care for it!" says Dulcie, "I love it! I would sit and listen for ages, but I can't play 'Willie, We Have Missed You,' or 'The Gypsy's Lament,' even. It is not aunt's fault," she adds, hastily, lest they should think that poor Aunt Fernor has neglected her ward's education. "She engaged a long-suffering music-mistress for me, and the poor woman used to sit for hours trying to teach me the scales. She cried one day, poor woman, and declared that it was of no use my going on, and, with a smile all round, 'I fully agreed with her.' But, turning to Edie, who stands as open-mouthed as a falconer can dare to be, 'I like to hear you play: will you go on; or perhaps you sing? I love singing. They always sing at Rome—everything sings at Rome—the women on their way to market, the men at their work, the boys in the streets! They couldn't help it: I used to sit in the balcony at the hotel and get a little crowd of them, and then set them scrambling for those ridiculous little copper pieces they have—it was great fun."

Silence profound. She looks from one to the other to see what is the matter with them. What has she said? Sir Hugh stands leaning against the mantel-piece, with that grim smile upon his face as if he were witnessing a choice comedy. Lady Falconer breaks the silence with a little dry cough.

"Very amusing, indeed, my dear," she says. "Would you like to play a game of chess with Maud?"

Dulcie stares first at the old lady, then at Maud.

And the Worst is Yet to Come—

MOTHERS WHO HAVE DAUGHTERS

Read How to Care for Their Health.

New Orleans, La.—"I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough, for I know my daughter never would have been so well if she had not taken it. For more than a year she had suffered agonies from irregularity, backache, dizziness, and no appetite, but is now well. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all mothers and daughters and you can publish this letter."—Mrs. A. Estrada, 129 N. Galvez Street, New Orleans, La.

Philadelphia, Pa.—My daughter was feeling tired and all run down with no apparent cause. She had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before and knew its value so she again purchased it and she was able to keep natural, and her system was built up completely. We generally keep the Vegetable Compound in the house for it is to be relied on."—Mrs. E. J. Purdy, 5131 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Women Have Been Telling Women for forty years how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored their health when suffering with female ills. Try it if you are troubled with any ailment peculiar to women.

Write for advice to Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co., Lynn, Mass.

"What. Where are you going?" demands Dulcie, open-eyed.

"To bed," says Edie, demurely.

"To bed?" echoes Dulcie, staring at the girl of eighteen. "Do you go to bed before the rest?"

"Yes," says Edie, with a sigh. "I am not 'out' yet, you know."

"I—see," says Dulcie, with a smile.

"When I am 'out' I shall sit up as long as I like—"

"Then take my advice," says Dulcie, with a smile, "remain 'in!' Good-night."

Edie, rippling over with smiles, takes her hand, but suddenly bends down and kisses her.

"You don't mind?" she murmurs.

"Mind!" exclaims Dulcie, and she puts her white, perfectly molded arm round the girl, and drawing her to her kisses her heartily.

Edie gets out of her embrace reluctantly, and kisses the other two ladies demurely, reserving Sir Hugh for the last.

Him she hugs, and in the midst of her hugs she whispers:

"Hugh, she is very nice. I—love her already," and then, with a prim courtesy disappears.

Dulcie rises; the formality, the primness are telling upon her. It seems as if there were no air in the room; she is stifling. She looks round—exactly as a wild animal, when he is first brought to the Zoo, looks round his cage—at the stiff, upright figure of Lady Falconer in the chair, at the still figure of Maud, bending over her crowd work, at Sir Hugh leaning against the mantel-piece, and she draws a long breath.

He has been watching her, and he comes to the rescue.

"The room is hot," he says. "You feel it?"

"No—yes," she says, feeling in a state of coma.

He strides to the window and opens it.

"Will you come out here?" he says, in a low voice. "Come and get cool."

She follows him, and steps out on to a terrace; there is a young moon, a crescent of pale lemon, too faint to light up more than the tops of the huge elms, and the statuary in the pleasure; but there is air, fresh, invigorating air, and Dulcie, leaning on the stone coping, draws a long breath.

Sir Hugh stands beside her, his tall, stalwart figure looking gigantic in the uncertain, deceptive light. He watches her for a minute, noting the exquisite profile, the beautiful sheen of the dark, shining hair as it shows in the light streaming from the window. Then he says:

"Well?"

She starts; her thoughts have been far away, in Rome and with the Carnival, in the Square with the ballad-singer shouting his song, and the crowd yelling the chorus. She starts and looks up at him with the smile which has worked such havoc on all that have come within its influence.

BRITISH STEAMER SUNK.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Sept. 23. The British steamer Lanegra, on her way from Buenos Aires to Havre with a cargo of Argentine beef, was sunk by a German submarine on Sept. 3rd, 45 miles off Plymouth, according to survivors of the crew, who arrived here to-day on an American ship.

GERMAN INTRIGUE.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23. The most startling revelation of German intrigue since the war began, implicating a Supreme Court Justice of New York City, was made last night by the Government Committee in Public Information. The expose is part of a systematic plan decided upon by the Government to present to the public evidence of plots and intrigue against the interests of the United States which have been traced to the German Embassy. Those named in the information given out last night as being connected with the plots include Supreme Court Justice Daniel F. C. Chalan, who is known as an ardent champion of the Irish cause; John Devey, editor of the Gaelic-American, a violent anti-British paper published in New York; Dr. Theo. Otto, of Allentown, Pa., who is still practising, and claims to be an American citizen; Geo. Silvester Viereck, editor of Viereck's Weekly; Marcus Brun, editor of Fair Play and a practical leader among the Hungarians of lower second Avenue, New York; Edwin Mason, a magazine writer, said to be in Africa. In this expose the Government officials make public letters, telegrams, bank cheques, receipts for cash paid, and a wealth of memorandum dating back to 1914, showing that the German Imperial Government was concerned through its representatives here in the violation of the laws of this land.

THINKS BELGIUM IN THE WAY.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 22. Maximilian Harden lecturing in Berlin yesterday said that he was convinced that peace was attainable this year if Germany promised to waive the right to rule Belgium. This statement aroused a hostile demonstration from the audience and many persons quitted the hall. After the interruption Herr Harden continued, "Whoever brings us peace, whether Socialist or Pope, is welcome. The fate of Belgium must be brought to a speedy decision, either we must annex Belgium or state openly that we never had any such intention. In any case the German people must decide for themselves their own lot."

COSTA RICA DECLARES WAR.

SAN JOSE, Sept. 22. The Costa Rican Government, by an official act yesterday afternoon, severed diplomatic relations with Germany. Passports were handed to the diplomatic and consular representatives of Germany here and the Costa Rican Legation and Consuls in Germany were recalled. The people and newspapers strongly approve of the Government's action.

SCHOOLS CLOSED IN PETROGRAD.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 22nd. All the universities here, except the Medical Schools, have been closed for a year commencing to-day, in pursuance of a plan to evacuate the unnecessary proportion of the population, in Petrograd. Manager Saitkoff, of the Department of the Interior, announced that the food supply question is in no wise desperate, the most serious being a shortage of coal.

BRITAIN'S LONG ARM.

SANTOS, Brazil, Sept. 22nd. The Dutch steamer Zeelandia from Buenos Aires to Amsterdam, by way of New York, is being detained here by the Brazilian authorities at the request of the British Legation at Rio Janeiro. It is charged that the steamer is loaded with a huge cargo of coffee, said to be destined for Germany.

Everyday Etiquette.

"When I accompany a young lady and her mother to a place of entertainment, ought I to walk beside the young lady or between the two. Where the walk is narrow should I precede the ladies or follow them?" Should the younger lady or the older precede me when the walk is only wide enough for two?"

"It looks better for the man to walk on the outside but there is nothing improper in his walking between the two women. Whether he should proceed or follow depends on circumstances. If it is a rough, muddy or stony way he may suggest that he better go ahead in order to warn the ladies of any obstacle. If it is a brightly lighted way he may fall behind. Common sense is really the guide in such smooth matters," advised his father.

Rabbits Plentiful

Though Price Remains High. There was a plentiful supply of rabbits in the local market on Saturday and again this morning. Torbay people were selling at 50 cents a brace and other country folk from different outlying settlements were asking only 40 and 50 cents a pair. Needless to say the latter disposed of their stocks quickly whilst the former found much difficulty in getting purchasers.

Workman Injured.

NOW IN HOSPITAL. A workman named Barrett, while cleaning up the deck of the S. S. Neptune in the dry dock on Saturday afternoon, fell through one of the hatchways into the hold, a distance of over 20 feet, and was picked up in an unconscious condition and lifted to the deck. Doctor McDonald was summoned and quickly responded. On examining the injured man he discovered that no bones were broken but there were several deep gashes about the face and scalp, while blood flowed freely. The ambulance was called out and accompanied by Doctor McDonald the sufferer was removed to the General Hospital. While on the way to the institution he regained consciousness.

Chaplin Tells of Soldier's Death.

Mr. John Clarke, of Campbellton, N. D. B., received a letter from Rev. A. Longridge, C. F., a Church of England Chaplain with the B. E. F. now in Belgium, telling of the passing of his own dear son. The writer adds the following which will concern the relatives of Pte. Kelly:—"I do not know whether you know the relatives of Private F. Kelly, 2879 1st Nfld. Regiment. He died after being severely wounded in the abdomen, with multiple wounds on leg, half an hour after operation, also on the 14, 8, 17. If you should know his people, will you give them this. He lies alongside your son in Dozinghem Cemetery, in plot 3, G. 20. He had no kit with him when arriving at this hospital, and I do not know whether he comes from Newfoundland or not. Dozinghem is three miles north of Poperinghe, in Belgium."

MOTOR CAR TRAGEDY.—The magisterial inquiry into the motor car tragedy, which occurred at the Goulds some weeks ago, was continued before Judge Morris on Saturday evening last. Doctors Tait, Anderson and McDonald, Detective Sergeant Byrne and John Ryan were sworn and examined. The inquiry will conclude this week.

Your Boys and Girls.

Much of the demoralization arising in family life at meal time is caused by either the irregular coming and going of school children, or the absence of this part of the family at the luncheon hour. The hastening away in the morning without time or care to appreciate a well prepared breakfast is an equal source of evil, but this lies in the hands of the homemaker alone to control.

Perhaps in this, as well as in other much talked of school reforms the parents are chiefly to blame for not
