Interesting Facts About Sea Fishes

SWORDFISH

Some Atlantic fishermen say:—"Where you see swordfish you may know that mackerel are about". Corollarily, it is he so, where you know there are mackerel you may look with assurance for swordfish.

Fishermen who seek the swordfish off our Nova Scotia coast, as well as scientific men, will hardly support this statement. While the mackerel make their appearance early in May, swordfish are seldom taken until August, so that if they are seeking the mackerel for food they're a bit late unless they expect to meet the schools on their southward migration.

The swordfish does appear to follow the same course as the mackerel up the Atlantic coast and Professor Goode would intimate that along the New England coast they follow quite close upon them.

The fishermen of Nova Scotia spear the swordfish. A platform, specially built and elevated upon the bowsprit, gives the observer, who is also the spearthrower, a commanding position. It swims near the surface, allowing its dorsal fin to appear above the water as also the upper lobe of the caudal. It frequently leaps out of the water, and none of all the fishes of the sea can swim more swiftly or is more agile in its movements. The observer when he sees the fish breaking water, must be quick to throw the lance. When the weapon does go home the fisherman must prepare for a lot of deep, because no creature of the deep has such a pugnacious disposition. It is played out and finally hoisted on board. The same method of capture is employed in fishing the tuna or horse mackerel on the Nova Scotia coast.

The swordfish derives its name from the fact that the bones of the upper jaw are consolidated into an elongated sword. This is its chief weapon of attack. The teeth are wholly wanting, there are no ventral fins, while the second of the two fins on the back is reduced to a slight finlet. The pointed head, the fins of the back and abdomen snugly fitting into grooves, the absence of ventral fins, slim, muscular body, adapt the fish for swift and powerful progression.

Professor Richard Owen, testifying in a British court as to the power of the swordfish, said:

"It strikes with the accumulated force of fifteen double handed hammers. Its velocity is equal to that of a swivel-shot, and is as dangerous in its effect as a heavy artillery projectile."

Professor Goode adds:

"Many very curious instances are on record of the encounters of this fish with other fishes, or of their attacks upon ships. What can be the inducement for it to attack objects so much larger than itself it is hard to surmise.

"It surely seems as if a temporary insanity sometimes takes possession of the fish. It is not strange that, when harpooned, it should retaliate by attacking its assailant. An old swordfish fisherman told Mr. Blackford that his vessel had been struck twenty times. There are, however, many instances of entirely unprovoked attack on vessels at sea.

"It is the universal testimony of our fishermen that two are never seen swimming close together. Captain Ashby says that they are always distant from each other at least thirty or forty feet.

"The pugnacity of the swordfish has become a byword. Without any special effort on my part numerous instances of their attack upon vessels have in the last ten years found their way into the pigeon-hole labelled 'swordfish.'"

Swordfish are common on both the European and American shores of the Atlantic. They do not breed on our shores, but probably do so in the Mediterranean and other warm seas. They undergo great change in the process of development. The very young ones have the head armed with rough spines and in nowise resemble the adults.

The swordfish is available in the Canadian markets most plentifully during the months of August and September. As a food fish it is one of the best, its dark-colored, oily, flesh making excellent steaks. Its average weight is three hundred and twenty-five pounds, and it attains a length of fifteen feet.

Nova Scotia fishermen in 1919 captured fish of the species to the value of $96,017, representing a weight of 741,100 pounds. It was practically all marketed fresh.

NEWSPAPERS

(From the Vancouver Sun)

In the course of its travels the newspaper goes into some very curious places. The huge rolls of paper on the press receive the imprint of type and come out in thousands of copies, each exactly alike. Like peas in a pod these copies go through the various stages of circulation. It is only when each copy reaches its ultimate destination that it takes on a character, an individuality of its own. Sometimes an old torn newspaper is picked up in the desert or on the plains, and seems like a breath of civilization to the foot-sore and weary traveller who longs for the fresh spots of comfort. Sometimes the home newspaper turns up in a foreign land and carries a tender message to the man who is forced to temporary exile. It means a great deal then, even though it be a week or a month old. Everywhere, every day, the newspapers leave the press to start on a journey of service across continents, oceans, mountains and plains. Everywhere they carry the news of the world—to the man on the street, to the old greybeard by the fireside and to the child in his cot. But if each copy of a newspaper had a soul, and a mind and a tongue to walk, it might wish to choose its own journey. And if all the places where newspapers go we think perhaps these copies would like best to find themselves in the sick room. A paper that goes into the places where weak, emaciated people lie, where hopeless men and women lift up their thin arms to spread the sheets to the light, has a great and enviable service to perform. To these sick ones, cut off from the world's activities by bodily ailments, the paper brings all the cities of the earth; it allows them to sit in the visitors' galleries of identified Parliaments. It takes them to every country on the globe, to the seaside, to the cool mountains, or to any spot where their fancy or their memory would lead them. And in doing all these things the newspaper perhaps eases some of their pain and takes away some of their hopelessness. This is part of the service which the daily newspaper willingly, gladly and regularly performs.

LITTLE GIRL MURDERED AT ST. JOHN

St. John, N. B., Aug. 9.—One of the most gruesome murders on record in the annals of crime in this city came to light this morning when the body of little Sadie McAuley, aged nine years, was found hidden beneath two large boulders on the hill leading down to Marble Cove, the victim of a human monster. The child had evidently been criminally assaulted and then murdered. A large boulder had been unheeded and the body placed in the hole, the legs doubled up and covered with another large flat rock, which, with the aid of a little earth and leaves, entirely obscured the body.

This morning a boy named James Kimball was picking berries on the hill and stepped on a large boulder which he moved, and he felt backwards, disclosing the body.

STOPPED AT YARMOUTH

A man halting from Halifax was stopped by Chief of Police Gill at Yarmouth on Tuesday evening of last week, as he was about to board the Prince George for Boston. The arrest was made on advice from Halifax that the man was attempting to leave the country without first settling a board bill he had contracted, amounting to $220.37. The man was held in jail there awaiting further instructions from that city.

The Modern Mary

Mary had a little calf that she found was a scrub. She sold it, bought a pure-bred one, and joined the Girl's Calf Club. To-day her other pure-bred calves sport ribbons from the show. And little Mary may be seen in her own big auto.

Children Cry for Fletcher's CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep.
