Whisky in its Place.

The following verses were written upon the occasion of hearing an old man make the remark that whisky was good in its place.

(Good in its place. Who is that place? Thou fiend that's cursed the human race. Who is that place? Oh, let me tell! For I have learned thy secret well.

Show me thy place where you have been, And there's the place where crime is seen, Show me the place your presence blights, And there's the place for brawls and fights.

Go see the graves that you have filled, Go see the blood that you have spilled; Then tell me that there is a place Where you should show your demon face.

Go ask the drunkard's wretched wife What's been the terror of her life; What turned her raven locks to snow, And laid her wretched husband low!

See how she looks, by God forsaken, See how by want and sorrow shaken; See her hide in deep disgrace, Then say no more about your place.

Go hear the orphan's cry for bread; Go hear the widow mourn her dead; Go ask the drunkard's haggard face, And ask of them where is thy place!

Ask the pauper at the poorhouse door, What makes his heavy heart so sore? He'll say, while tears run down his face, Because he had for you a place.

Go see the place where demons lurk Go watch them at their devilish work, As they with knives each other chase, And there, vile whisky, is thy place.

There's where the gallows finds its food, There's where the poison gets its brood; There's where crime and poverty embrace While rushing on their headlong race.

Whisky, thy vile and stifling breath Has laid many a lofty form in death; Your fiery tongue like scorpions sting, And misery, death, and sorrow bring.

Tell not to me that hateful lie, Nor seek thy havoc to deny; For you the human souls debase, Thou art death and shame in any place.

Second Gobbler—"My name is Anarchy."
"My long-lost son! Come to my arms."
"Art thou my father?"
