demands upon one's time are so many and so urgent, it is impossible for any but the favored few to wade through the multiplicity of publications and make their own selections, to say nothing of the expense involved in such a course. Anything which promises to relieve one of this burden, renders a true service which cannot fail of ready recognition and hearty appreciation. How much is due The Living Age for time and money thus saved it is impossible to estimate.

To the busy man of affairs and to the mistress of the family, with time as fully occupied with domestic cares and social duties, such a magazine is valuable. And yet with its wealth of choice and interesting matter it appeals with not less force to those of elegant leisure and scholarly tastes. So to all classes of intelligent readers it proves a welcome visitor.

The extra inducements to all subscribers for the coming year are remarkable. Extending their popular clubbing arrangements whereby other periodicals may be obtained at greatly reduced prices, they now include two standard American works, a valuable history of the United States and a splendid work on the Bible.

To all new subscribers for the year 1893, will be sent gratis the two October issues containing a powerful story by Frank Harris, editor of the Fortnightly Review, entitled Profit and Loss, and also the numbers of 1892 published after the receipt of their subscriptions.

Send fifteen cents for sample copy and further particulars to Littell & Co., Boston.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE FOR 1893.

For nearly half a century The Living Age has held a place in the front rank of American periodicals—coming week by week freighted with the most valuable literary products of foreign lands. It selects with rare judgement and discrimination the most masterly productions, scientific, biographical, historical, political; the best essays, reviews, criticisms, tales, poetry, in fact everything the intelligent reader most desires to obtain.

Not only is its literary character unsurpassed but its mechanical excellencies are equally noticeable. With new, clear and handsome type, spaced lines, excellent paper and good press work, it is as near perfection as any periodical can well be.

As the years pass, the more does The Living Age prove itself a necessity. In this busy age when the
