much in favor of corporal punishment. This gentleman says that the pupils' spelling and arithmetic are much improved by the fear of the blue beech. His experience of the effectiveness of stimulating the brain by the mechanical application of pain to the skin is analogous to the experience of the Russian convict prisons, where the science of corporal punishment was brought to such a high state of perfection that by simply increasing the suffering produced to the necessary degree of severity, it was found possible to make the men do just what was wanted. In some cases the number of strokes necessary to produce the desired effect was so high that the men selfishly expired before they had completed their punishment; but this difficulty was overcome by the ingenuity of the prison officials, who adopted the practice of not giving more than one thousand strokes at one time, then waiting for the wounds to heal up before inflicting the remainder of the punishment.

The question remains, however, whet there the desired effect cannot be produced by more intelligent methods. The question remains, however, whet there the desired effect cannot be produced by more intelligent methods. Certainly many countries get as good and better results without resorting to corporal punishment. In fact, some prison governors, like Mr. Osborne, actually declare that the more you treat a criminal as if he was a man, and not a beast, the better results you will get. Many people aver that the old methods of treating the convict neither benefit him nor anyone else; that he only becomes worse. Is it not probable that in the case of children the ultimate effect is the same? True, the convict can be forced to obey in this manner, and the children as our "educationist" points out, can be made to spell, but the "blue beech" has very many other effects which are not so desirable. It affects the mental attitude of the pupil towards his teachers; it affects the general morale and self-respect of the whole school. I have seen children who are more distressed and ashaned if one of their number is whipped than they would be if they received the punishment themselves.

May not all this be true as regards boys and girls? A boy may be an incorrigible scamp, and the law deals with him as such. It does not ask how he got that way. If we were to make careful inquiries, we would find that either his parents, his teachers, his companions or the magistrate, were more to blame or the magistrate, were more to blam

Abstract justice is not enough. You may treat a boy with kindness, but if the real or higher self is invisible to you, and you horse inevitably becomes what his trainer and others believe him to be, even if they do give him sugar.

I simply don't believe in the incorrigibility of boys, who, after being let off, start stealing again. We don't treat them with true sympathy or intelligence, and so they go from bad to worse. We imagine that if we send them to the Sunday school and read them a story about King Eglon, or Nebuchadnezzar, or Jehosaphat, that they will reform. It never enters our stupid heads that if we were to read them stories like "Ishmael," or Canon Farrar's or Dickens's, or any book that presents a vivid and, high ideal of manhood, it would do a thousand times more good than all this Bible stuff, and yet wall admit the frequently fatal effect of the dime novel What was the secret of Judge Lindsay's marvelous success in reforming these "terrible young criminals" many a time with just a few kind, blunt words? WINDSOR, Aug. 16.—Special investigations by Mayor Winter of Windsor, one of seven appointed by Western Ontario municipalities, to probe the natural gas supply question, were concluded tonight, when he learned that two companies in Wallaceburg, alone, Wallaceburg Glass Company and Wallaceburg Sugar Refineries, consumed $80,000,000 cubic feet of gas annually, which, added to other industrial concerns in the area affected, totals 1,276,000,000 cubic feet for all manufacturing plants given special permission by the Government to use this fuel. Windsor during the past year used but 1,759,233,000 for domestic consumption.

AT LOEW'S

A story of the appealing type, i which Ethel Clayton has been specializ-ing lately, is unfolded in "A Lady In Love," which opened a three-day en-gagement at Loew's Theatre yesterday afternoon.

The central figure is an innocet convent girl, Barbara, who mistakes a romantic temperament for love and elopes to marry, as she thinks, a suave rascal. He is the ne'er-do-well brother of her guardian. The latter takes her into his home when her "husband" disappears, sought by law for frauds. Her presence arouses the jealousy of her guardian's wife, who is carrying on a love affair with a man, who, unknown to her, is a friend of Barbara's fugitive "husband." Barbara, despite her feelings, falls in love with Jack Brent, a very prosperous young lawyer from New York. Brent, at the behest of Barbara's guardian, takes up the case of proving her marriage invalid, owing to the discovery of a wife and child of her "husband's." Through a dramatic series of events matters
