CALLS FOR TRIBUNAL

Britain Willing to Have U.S. Naval Officers Decide on Case.

LONDON, Jan. 4, 6.40 p.m.-A British official statement issued to day says:

"Sir Edward Grey, secretary fo foreign affairs, has answered the complaint by the Germans thru American embassy regarding destruction off the coast of Ireland of a German submarine and crew by the a German submarine and crew by the British auxiliary Baralong by referring to various German outrages. Sir Edward Grey offers to submit such incidents including the Baralong case, to an impartial tribunal, composed, say, of officers of the United States navy.

"The foreign office has presented to the house of commons the full corres-pondence between Ambassador Page and Sir Edward Grey concerning the case. A memorandum from Germany concerning the sinking of the sub-marine includes effidavits from six Americans— J. M. Garrett of Kiln, Mississippi. Charles G. Hightower of Mississippi. Charles G. Hightower of Crystal City, Texas, Bud Emerson Palen of Detroit. Edward Clark of Detroit, R. H. Cosby of Crystal City and James J. Curren, Chicago. The above were all muleteers aboard the steamer Nicosian and witnessed the Baralong's destruction of the sub-

Good progress continues to be made in the building up of Col. Chedwick's unit. He received 84 more recruits yesterday, which places 756 as the strength of the 124th "Pals" Battalion. The "Pals" Battalion under Major B. H. Ardaga held its first route march

Major-Gen. Sir Sam Hughes, min ster of milita, found time during his one-day visit to Toronto to inspect two of the battalions at Exhibition camp, the 95th, Col. R. K. Barker, commander, and the 97th A"merican Legion," er, and the 97th A"merican Legion,"
Col. A. B. Clark, commander. Accompanied by his staff and the divisional officers he saw the battalions go thru their drill. Both regiments made a fine showing, altho the American Legion is only as yet up to helf strength. He praised the soldiers fine appearance and said he hoped the American Legion would be one of the battalions in the aversesse division which General Legion would be one of the battanons in the overseas division which General Logie is to command. On his arrival in Toronto Sir Sam breakfasted at the King Edward Hotel with Dr. J. L. Hughes, W. F. Maclean, M.P., and the staff officers who came with him from Ottom.

Ottawa. Toronto's Contribution. Official figures issued at Exhibition Camp Headquarters yesterday after-noon by Major Geo. H. Williams, senior recruiting officer for this division, show that 39.378 men have been recruited in the Toronto military district up to Dec. 23. This is 3.3 per cent. of this division's population of 1,235,000 people. To supply its share towards the 500,000 soldiers required the proportion hould be 7 per cent.

should be 7 per cent.

He stated that the City of Toronto has given 16,953 men to the colors. Hamilton 3,819, and the outside sections of the division 18,596. In considering what the Toronto division has done it must be borne in mind that in addition to the men mentioned in the foregoing another 10,000 Old Country men of the British army and navy re-serves have also gone overseas. Major Williams calculates that to de its share towards the new order for 5,000.000 men the Toconto district must aise 47,000 more men. from the Toronto military division.

Men Wanted for C. F. A.

No. 12 section of the 3rd Divisional Ammunition Column requires thirty men immediately to complete its establishment. This unit at Exhibition camp, which is leaving shortly for overseas, is essentially a mounted one, its function being to carry ammunition to the batteries. Only men experienced in andling horses or experienced in gunnery can be taken, as men of the ammunition column are interchangeable with the men of the firing battery. Only men of high standard and character need apply, as this unit has a very limited time to reach a high state of efficiency. Recruits are asked to apply at the 9th Battery, armories, or Divisional Ammunition Column, orderly reom at Exmunition Column, orderly room at Ex-munition Column, orderly foom a such hibition camp.

The 74th 76th, 81st. 83rd, 68th, 95th, 97th and 98th Battalions are each to detail one officer and one N.C.O. to attend a special two weeks' machine gun training course in Toronto.

The next course for officers at the school of instruction old Technical School, College street, starts on Feb. 14. The next examination for captains' and field officers' certificates will be held on Jan. 17 and 18. These examinations are only available for officers in overseas battalions.

FRENCH GUNS DESTROY MACHINE GUN SHELTER

garia, which so lightly gave hostages to fortune last autumn and attacked Serbia in alliance with the Teuton and the Turk. King Ferdinand has always had the reputation of being cowardly, like the King of Greece, if reports are to be credited. He is said to be quite capable of offering to sell out the Germany to the allies. at the Germans to the allies.

Unofficial despatches and letters from Canadian soldiers at the front hint at something big that is going to develop in the war, perhaps, this week. Stories of a Lending attack on the whole allied positions by the Germans have not been telegraphed across the Atlantic for a week or so, and officers from the front say that the British and French would welcome German offensive operations, but that the enemy has in reality been merely parading men around to make a great show as a sort of bluff, and that his lines have been worn dangerously thin at many points.

Following a prolonged spell of censorship in Russia, the French have evidently clamped on the censor also with greater vigor than ever. Official reports are now delayed 12 to 24 hours, and the same thing happens to other reports. T. P. O'Connor, whose position gives him a measure of access to authentic information, says that the recent Russian stringency of news was created by a veil drawn across the eastern theatre to hide the putting of two million fresh troops in the field. These new armies, he says, are as well equipped as the German, and they are certain to make their presence felt in the not too remote future. As the allies have completed plans for a full co-ordination of strategy, it would not be surprising if the French made some offensive in the Vosges and Alsace. The entire control of Alsace could be made a preliminary to the throwing of forces across the upper Rhine and the invasion of Westphalia. . While holding the Germans in Belgium, a considerable French force could do a mortal injury to Germany by seizing the highly industralized area on which the Germans depend for a constant supply of machine tools. Closer to the border of Holland lie the Krupp Gun Works at Essen and the main coal fields of Germany. Such allied strategy would be based on the knowledge that the effective reserves of the German army are exhausted, with the exception of some 600,000 or 800,000 boys of 17 and 18 that the Germans will mobilize for the spring.

Enough has already come thru from Russia and Austria-Hungary to weal the fact that the Russians are having the best of the fighting Galicia, Bukowina and Volhynia. It is not in the Austrian statements that the important points about the offensive are stated, for Vienna merely reports those incidents where Russian attacks have been repulsed. Russians report the pushing back of the lines of the enemy on the Strypa Russians report the pushing back of the lines of the course of River and on the heights near Czernowitz. If one follows the course of illness. The coroner's jury returned a verdict that Douch met his death by events on the map, one will see that the main efforts of the Russians are events on the map, one will see that the main efforts of the line, and against the events on the map, one will see that the main efforts of the Russians are being directed against the southern extremity of the line, and against the section in the north, which reposes on the Pripet marshes. Attacks are being made all along the rest of the intervening front to pin the Austrians and Germans down to their trenches, so that they cannot get away. In the north and the south of this 225-mile front, where the Russians are making headway, their objective is plainly the railway junctions at Kovel and Czernowitz. The secure possession of the lines at Czernowitz would cut the enemy off from Roumania and prevent the exportation of Roumanian wheat to the central powers. A vast amount of German railway rolling stock is reported to have been sent into Roumania for the harvest, and a sudden blow here would deprive the enemy of a great number of cars at a time when he would be most in need of them for a winter campaign, which the Russians are patently forcing on him. Winter fighting is dreaded by German and Austrian commanders, owing to the fearful amount of sickness which it brings on the soldiers. Austrian losses in the Carpathians last winter are now said by experts to be nearly a million and a half men.

Further study of the situation which is now developing in the eastern theatre of the war leads a person to the conclusion that the Russians are either fighting to continue the process of exhaustion of the reserves of the enemy or they are fighting for the purpose of forcing the enemy to give general battle. The movements against Czernowitz and Kovel may be the beginning of a turning movement with the object of bending back the extremities of the hostile line and the piercing of the centre, so as to force a precipitate retreat. That plan was adopted by Gen. Ruszky in the battle infantry which Sir Sam Hughes last of Lemberg, in the early days of the war, when 600,000 Austrians were night said he expected of this district, defeated with the loss of 130,000 prisoners alone, and of an army of means not 47,000 more men, but 90,000 170,000 men that was besieged in Przemysl and later captured. In this blow five-sixths of the Austrian first line army was put out of action. A repetition of the same feat with a million and a half Austro-Germans would almost decide the war. Whether it can be done depends on the number of men that the Russians can put in their fighting line. A concentration of 10,000 men to a mile, or about 2,250,000 men, would be amply sufficient First Meeting of County Council against a hostile force of two-thirds that strength.

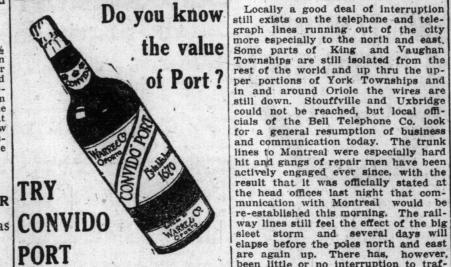

It must be supposed that the German and Austrian submarines will be able to sink some more ships in the Mediterranean. Certain facts in connection with these operations are to be noted. First of all, the offensive of the submersibles was conducted around the Dardanelles. This menace was counter after the lapse of sufficient time for the preparation of defensive measures, and the little boats had to seek marine pastures elsewhere. Then followed a flurry off the coast of Italy, when the Ancona was sunk and some transports of the allies were also done away with. But of late British and French transports appear to be immune, probably as a result of protection by the British navy. The submarines now are operating in the eastern Mediterranean and near the Suez Canal. The inference is These boats are being shepherded by some unseen force and are fleeing eastward. They occasionally snipe a peaceful trade or passenger ship, but a person may be reasonably sure that their days are numbered, and they will join the majority of the German submarines.

The silence of the navy is uncanny. After a long interval it has leaked out that the great German battleship cruiser Van der Tann has been destroyed, but whether from her unfortunate experience when she and her sister ships had an encounter with the squadron under the command of Admiral Beatty in the North Sea a year ago, or whether she was prematurely doomed by the action of British submarines in the Baltic remains mystery that will not be cleared up till after the war.

The kalser has cancer of the throat. This is the story which The Paris Matin, a reliable newspaper, gives to its readers with all the earmarks of authenticity. The malady has so far progressed as to render his imperial majesty speechless. As the progress of the disease is slow, the emperor may still hold the imperial reins for some time longer. He will be the more disposed to do so when he stops to consider that the crown prince would naturally fall into his shoes if he withdraws from the military stage. Persons familiar with the imperial household describe the heir of the Hohenzol lerns as a gilded individual, who is not burdened with the handicap of a superfluous intellect, but is full of go, and his record as a military commander, indicates, it is said, a reckless disregard of the impedimenta imposed by the principles of warfare.
