HISTORY OF THE 52ND

Writer Tells of Stay in St. John and Pays Tribute to Hospitality of Citizens

His Worship Mayor Hayes has received from the author a copy of the book published by Private W. C. Miller of Fort William on the 52nd Battalion, a battalion which, while quartered in St. John for a few months, won the favor of the citizens. The book is entitled "From Thunder Bay Through Ypres With the Fighting 52nd." It is a book of 100 pages and carries the reader from the time the stakes of the tents of the battalion were pulled at Greasey Park Camp at Fort Arthur, Ont., with the battalion overseas and through the famous battle of Ypres. While at Ypres the writer was wounded in the Seldentary Wood and he tells in interesting fashion of his hospital experiences afterwards, continuing the history of the battalion from reports received from other members of his unit.

Concerning their stay in St. John, the author writes:
"Sunday morning, the 8th of November, found us in the quiet old town of St. John, N. B., where, amid torrents of rain, the mayor and officials of the town were waiting to welcome us. The welcome included a very good and substantial dinner, served to us all upon our arrival in the station. From the day we arrived in St. John until the day we left, the people there vied with each other in making our stay comfortable and pleasant. We all expected to train in St. John all winter but, in a little over two weeks' time the order came to again move—this time overseas. To the tune of 'Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here,' etc., we moved out of St. John's armories on the morning of the 22nd and were soon aboard the S. S. California. Most of the workers of St. John were given a day off to see us embark and, judging by the tearful leave-taking between some of the ladies of the town and some of our boys one came to the conclusion that they sure had been making the best of their short stay."

FRED. WHELPLEY DEAD

Former Noted Skater Victim of Spanish Influenza

Fred WHELPLEY, once a famous skater, and whose father, the late J. A. WHELPLEY, was the original master of the Long Reach skate, is one of the victims of Spanish influenza. He died at his home in Massachusetts. He is survived by his wife, one child, his mother and one sister.
The WHELPLEYS formerly had a skate factory at Jones' Creek, on the river, and did a large business. The competition of cheap German goods helped to put them out of business. Fred WHELPLEY went to Massachusetts and became foreman in a large manufacturing plant, having full charge of their most important work. All who were interested in skating contests years ago remember him very well.

ALONG THE RIVER

This was a perfect morning on the river. The surface of the stream was like glass, reflecting the trees and houses on the shore, showing with remarkable fidelity every tint and shade of the gorgeous autumn coloring. A low belt of fog covered part of Grand Bay. Above and below it all was sunshine. The sun on the low-lying leveals has been gathered. There has been considerable loss of potatoes through rot.
The Ocoee comes down only four times per week now. Today she had a considerable quantity of potatoes and other vegetables, apples and some pork. The green grass gone for the most part from the hills along the river. Only the patches of evergreen here and there contrast with the rich yellow, browns and reds of the poplars, birches, elms and maples. The whole country-side is a riot of autumn coloring.
