As a delegate from Victoria, accompanied by George Jay, he attended the convention was as a result of his visit his views in regard to the future potentialities of the work of the convention are greatly strengthened. He is in accord in regard to the need for more individual teaching upon the pupils whose preliminary and intermediate education is in the hands of the school board system.

One idea that impressed him perhaps more than any other was the need for the socialization of educational work. The delegates were almost unanimous in their approval of the individual teaching. The schools were for the children, not the children for the schools, was the new motto, and he was compelled to state that he was an ardent devotee of the idea.
