Anderson is lukewarm

Despite discussions concerning faculty unionization held by faculty members recently, UNB's president John Anderson said there is no movement to unionize on this campus.

Anderson said he prefers the notion of universities retaining autonomy in operation consistent with any non-union professional body, "but if it is the wish of the faculty (to unionize) I'm not going to oppose such a move."

"Nobody in Canada really knows what the result of faculty unions will be," said Anderson, because they are relatively new. Attempts at predicting the results of faculty unionization are speculation, he added.

"One of the consequences is certainly a change in the operation of the university - significant changes affecting both faculty and students."

He did not say if he thought the changes would be favorable or detrimental to the university.
