Do you suffer from some type of phobia? Too bad. There is a great deal of rampant stupidity in this world, and while I don't think, I don't think you should hold any of this against me. Not that I wouldn't do it to you, but hey, not any problem of mine. As far as it goes though, I will try to allay the fears you have of this world, regardless of how realistic they may be.

Vot in the last election? Talk to your MP lately? The Miserable Putz probably hasn't gotten in touch with you lately either. Remember, in this country the government is representative. That means the MP is the embodiment of of the voters. The Gov. sucks, so do you.

Technology is very risky stuff. You could hurt others, your own peril aside. This should be sufficient warning. STAYAWAY! Personally I love technology in all it's myriad forms, my biggest problem is the useless-to-themself's people who attempt to use technology, so stay away. Just in case you are interested you are still interested in wasting something, like a perfectly good computer, heressome advice. The computer will destroy your file if it get's the chance, it doesn't enjoy being abused by Luddites any more than any other Cotton Gin. Why ask any one to help you? Screwing up on your own is half the exciting of being allowed to use something that you couldn't even attempt to explain to someone smarter than yourself, that is if you new one. If whatever your doing seems easy, you are doing it wrong and probably destroying whatever it is you are using.

I had some Pizza tonight. It was from Pauper's Pizza. Very good stuff. Ask for the hot sauce, they mean it and it kicks.

If you are looking for advice on what to buy, DON'T. If you need advice you obviously have no clue to what it is you want or need. This applies to everything, from clothes to cars. Be willing to admit you own patheticness and crawl back under your rock. Hey! Why are you reading this crud! I think my point has been made. You are irrelevant to others in a way that would amaze those believing in Darwinian evolution. I'm not even going to continue writin
