A mustard plaster made with the white of an egg will not leave a blister.

If a person is suddenly attacked with violent convulsions and loss of consciousness, you may know that he has a fit of some kind. The head should be raised a little, and no stimulant given, the limbs should be allowed plenty of freedom and a little beef tea or milk should be given on recovery.

Correct standing is said to be a cure for nervous depression, insomnia and a host of other ills. Stand perfectly erect, with the chest well raised, beginning with periods of ten minutes, and gradually increasing to half an hour. The pressure of the internal organs will be relieved, the blood more thoroughly oxygenized, and the tone of the whole system wonderfully improved.

Send your little child to bed happy. Whatever cares press, give her a warm good-night kiss as she goes to her pillow. The memory of this, in the stormy years which may be in store for the little one, will be like Bethlehem's star to the bewildered shepherds. "My father, my mother loved me!" Nothing can take away that blessed heart balm. Lips parched with the world's fever will become dewy again at the thrill of youthful memories. Kiss your little child be-London, Can. fore she goes to sleep.

next morning. But she went down to breakfast with a bright face. Hannah remarked it. "I feel so happy," laughed the girl. "I am going to have that room." Hannah looked at her in surprise. "It was cousin Phobe who was buying that furniture," and Rowena told her how she knew. "I can't bear to think of her being disappointed," she added, gravely. "So I am going. I feel sure that I can be happy hardly wait to see that room."

with her. And I shall try to be like a daughter to her. I shall write to her at once and tell her I'll be there next week. Won't she be surprised when she sees me? for of course she does not know it was I the other day."
"Well," said Hannah, heartily,

Humorous.

TOO REMINISCENT.

Mrs. Bagley was not timid; still, tramps were scarce in that neighborhood, and the one approaching the house did not present a reassuring appearance. The old lady glanced toward the barn and down the lane, reflecting uneasily on her husband's habit of being late for

The tramp, also, had reconnoitred the barn-yard, and noted the absence of a man. He slouched confidently round to the kitchen door, seated himself on the step, peering impudently from under his scraggly brows at the neat, motherly woman, and sniffed at the agreeable odors from the stove.

"I-I s'pose you're hungry," said Mrs. Bagley, bravely breaking the embarrassing silence and going straight to what she hoped was the only point.

"Guess I am," drawled the vagabond. Got a big thirst, too. Guess you might's well gimme suthin to drink until you git dinner ready."

Mrs. Bagley hastily took the coffee-pot from the stove, poured out a cup of the steaming beverage and handed it to her self-invited guest, praying that Hiram would appear before anything worse developed.

The tramp greedily gulped down the greater part of the contents of the cup; then he started up violently, rolling his eyes wildly. Next he gazed into the cup, seemed to recollect something, and then made a horrible face at his quaking

"Same ez ma uster do," he remarked, in a changed and chastened tone. After another frightful face, he forced himself to finish the cup.

"Ma uster put in merlasses," he went on in the intervals of continued facial contortions. "But this is the c'rect thing, all right, same ez ma made. I'll bet anything it come from the no'th side o' the tree!"

"Oh, you poor man!" gasped Mrs. Bagley, for the last words had thrown light on the matter. The coffee-pot was really there on the stove, sending out its delicious fragrance; but in her haste and perturbation she had seized the old coffee-pot. Her grandson over in Brusselville was ailing with spring fever, and in "the old coffee-pot" was brewing one of those old-time concoctions made from the bark of wild cherry, dogwood and yellow sweet-apple, cut religiously, of course, from the "north side of the

"How 'did' I ever come to make such a mistake! cried the kindly old lady, her fear lost in remorseful sympathy. ' Just you wait a minute and I'll fix up something to take out the taste, you poor-boy, you!'

The "boy," strangely subdued, meekly accepted the coffee and plate. He hastily disposed of the quarter of apple pie; then thrusting the doughnuts into his pockets, he rose. "Guess I'll be goin'. Good day, ma'am!"

"Now have some more coffee," urged the motherly woman, "and you better sit and rest a while."

"No, guess I'll be goin'." The tramp grinned, sheepishly. "I shouldn't be s'prised if next thing you'd be takin' me acrost your knee an' layin' it on good an' plenty-same ez ma uster do. Guess I'll be movin' on."
