DOOM SOUNDED. Mr. Marconi added that the latest guns of the allies are more powerful than before and they have shells enough to keep them going night and day without a let up. "Doom has sounded for the Germans."

SAW AIR-FIGHTS Mr. Marconi, with a staff officer of the Italian army, climbed a tree one day during the fighting and witnessed fight off the British and French aeroplanes, which were dropping bombs upon the German lines.

THRILLING EXPERIENCE "It was a thrilling spectacle to see that air fight while the Germans and allied guns engaged in their terrific duel below," said Mr. Marconi, "The allies showed themselves to be superior with air craft. While the Germans managed to drop some bombs on the British and French fighters, the allies air craft chased them away and kept the supremacy of the air while their men afield drove the Germans to re-
