MARCONI SYSTEM OPEN

Commercial Messages May Now Be Sent by Wireless.

Another Stride in the World's Progress—Regular Service Across the Atlantic Inaugurated Yesterday—Operators Were Kept Busy—Sir Wilfrid Laurier Sends Greeting to People of Great Britain.

Sydney, N. S., Oct. 18.—Yesterday afternoon the system of wireless transatlantic communication passed from its experimental stage in a formal announcement made by the inventor to a practical basis and for the first time in the history of the world messages are being transmitted and received to and from England, commercially.

The formal opening of the station here was attended by no special function, nor was there any actual demonstration made in test of the service. From early morning Mr. Marconi is said to have transmitted in all between five and ten thousand words.

At 2.45 he left the operating room for a moment to announce officially to the representatives of the press present the opening of the station for commercial work.

"I am perfectly satisfied," he said, "with the results of today's work. We are now prepared to accept a limited number of transatlantic messages for transmission purposes. Of course," he said, "you must not confuse to-day's event with that of three years ago, when the first message was flashed across the ocean. To-day we are merely throwing open our doors to the public and inaugurating the work for which our company was formed."

"Three years ago our messages were directed to the crowned heads of Europe. There is no need of that now. Indeed the bulk of our messages to-day emanated from the more important newspapers of the world."

"One message, however, addressed to the British people from the Premier of Canada was sent, while two have been received from the Canadian commissioner in London. I am not permitted to give the text of these messages, though I may say they are all of a congratulatory nature and all emphasize the great benefit accruing to the Empire by reason of the successful operation of our system."

Mr. Marconi then returned to the operating table, after expressing his regret that because of the great amount of work to go through, he would be unable to further speak of the day's happenings. Early in the afternoon the guests invited to attend the opening, together with the press representatives, began to arrive at the station, and at 2.30 the whole party conducted by the manager of the station, Mr. Vyvyan, set out on a tour of inspection.

The boiler-house, engine room and work shop were visited first. Their relation to the operation of the plant being explained on tour. The operation offices were finally reached, and a halt made to await the appearance of the inventor.

No one was allowed to actually enter the operating room, although the party were permitted to view through a window the work going on within. Marconi, assisted by another operator, could be seen seated at a table, alternately receiving and transmitting messages. Simultaneously with the pressing of the key of the transmitting instrument a blinding flash of blue flame was seen being given off from a contrivance situated at the far end of the room, while a tearing sound not unlike the twanging of a deep bass string answered the flash as it traversed the wires overhead.

The messages were recorded by means of a magnetic telephonic receiver fastened to the head of the operator and connected to the receiving apparatus of the station. After an hour's wait the inventor appeared and publicly gave utterance to the announcement previously given.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier sent the following message to the people of Great Britain via the brandie:

"Greetings to the people of Great Britain upon attainment between the British and Canadian coasts of Marconi's last and greatest triumph over distance."

In an interview Marconi referred to Sir Hiram Maxim's criticism of wireless telegraph on account of its limitations.

Sir Hiram specified its lack of privacy and therefore uselessness in time of war, as the enemy could rig up a tower and tap the messages as they were going through the air. Marconi says he is now in continuous communication between the old and new worlds and he has satisfied himself from experiment that the messages cannot be intercepted by rival companies.

INTERNATIONAL S. S. LESSON FOR TO-MORROW.

The Captain of Jericho—Joshua 6, 8-20. Read Joshua 5, 8.

Golden Text—By faith the walls of Jericho fell down, after they were compassed about seven days.—Heb. 11.30.

The remarkably marvelous overthrow, capture and destruction of any city, ancient or modern, by hurricane, earthquake or armed men. Joshua, with 603,000 soldiers, in the prime of life, having just undergone the Hebrew rite of circumcision, neglected for the past 40 years—and having partaken of the passover with its memories of the destroying angel, enthused and inspired with religious patriotism, directed by God, who was ready to miraculously interfere with His own laws of nature, as at the Red Sea and the raging overflow of Jordan, and who sends them a Prince of Jehovah as commander in chief.

All God asks of Israel, as He does of us, is to trust and obey Him. What a queer way this religious What a queer way this religious of Jericho with its closed gates, and seven times on the 7th day, the Sabbath trumpet, silence—Y. 10—save the trumpet of the priests, "not a sound heard, neither shall any word proceed out of your mouth until I bid you shout, then shall ye shout." These salvationists obeyed; the priests with the Ark of the Covenant, their trumpets sounding, and a silent escort, was to overthrow a most unlikely way to overthrow a fortified city, but the wisdom of men is foolishness with God, and His foolishness is wiser than man's wisdom. Israel has nothing to boast of when the walls fall flat by the power of God alone. Could He not have made the walls fall on His enemies would use His people as His executioners. Not a soul remained alive to tell the tale save a harlot named Rahab. She and all her kin were saved by a blood red sign on the only part of the wall God left standing, because she alone had faith in God, repented, gave up her fellow countrymen at the risk of her life and she saved theirs. God honors her memory by making her ancestress or progenitor of our Lord Jesus Christ.—Matt. 1-5.

HIGHGATE.

The Orford Fair was held in this village on Friday and Saturday of last week. In spite of the chilly, threatening state of the weather the attendance was good. The exhibits in all classes were exceedingly large with the exception of the cattle. The entries in this class were not as numerous as in former years, but the exhibit made was of a very superior order.

The concert held in the Township Hall on the evening of the second day of the fair, under the auspices of the Agricultural Society, drew a very large crowd. Those who were present enjoyed an excellent program furnished by Misses Irving and Crawford, and Mr. Harry Bennett, of Toronto. Mr. Whitney Sherer, of Ridgeway, presided at the piano during the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Reycraft, of Glencoe, spent Saturday and Sunday with Highgate friends.
