Christmas Greetings

Christmas 1915.

Since the Christmas of 1914 a year of war has gradually slipped past. It has brought to many homes sorrow and sadness, and Christmas greetings and good wishes between earnest minded and thoughtful people will naturally and fittingly take on a subdued, though heartfelt, tone.

It is a time for us to remember in deep sympathy, the homes from which, in some cases the husband, and in others the sons, have gone out to do their part in serving and saving the cause of international and social freedom; in many cases laying down their lives or returning maimed and broken; that others may live and breathe the clear, sweet air of free countries. Lives thus lost and disablements so gained on behalf of others, demand sacrifices of thanks-giving from all who may not or cannot themselves undertake such like active service. And at this Christmas time may this spirit of thankfulness manifest itself in actions of the widest and largest practical help toward and on behalf of those who suffer, or who may be called on to suffer later, owing to the terrible experiences whose choice or lot it has been or will yet be to stand in the forefront of the battles for freedom, home and country.

In Western Canada our fields have produced as never before, our barns and our storehouses are full, and figuratively our cup overflows. Our country and our homes are undisturbed by the sound of war, and we go and come without let or hindrance. Therefore let our thankfulness be shown through the material giving out of the abundance Providence has showered upon us, and so may this Christmas time be a time of sober, kindly Christian thought and feeling, and helpful service amid the numerous and special opportunities arising out of the present eventful and fateful time in the world's history.

For all, whether in health and contentment or in suffering and sadness, we sincerely and heartily wish the highest Christmas blessings, and a never failing faith in all that is highest and best.
