conditions. In some conditions the gain from the use of Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil is rapid. For this reason we put up a 5oz. size, which is enough for an ordinary cough or cold or useful as a trial for babies and children.

conditions. In other conditions gain must be slow, sometimes almost imperceptible, health can't be built up in a day. For this Scott's Emulsion must be taken as nourishment, food rather than medicine, food prepared for tired and weak digestions.

conditions. Mr. Smith was taken to the Park, and met there the children who were then extant. His conductor 'said suffen' to the lady in charge of them, doubtless telling her of Her Majesty's command, and the good old man talked to the children in his kindly way for a few minutes. Then he took off his white-brimmed white leaver hat, and standing bareheaded in the sunshine, he prayed that the blessing of God might be upon them and abide with them. Then he turned his face homeward, and went back to the simple every-day life of a Norfolk farmer.

conditions. Not long afterwards he received a box which had been brought from London by the carrier, and in it he found a most beautiful family Bible, with a note explaining that it was a present from the Queen and Prince Albert. Mr. Smith carefully packed it up again, and returned it with a letter to the Queen, asking her 'if she would be so good as to write her name in it.' The Bible came back in due time with the autograph signatures, not of Her Majesty only, but of the Prince also, and of all the children—even the babe's little hand had been guided to write its name—and under the signatures the Queen had written with her own hand, 'A memento of the visit of a good man.' Mr. Smith had a large glass case made to cover the Bible, and on certain days he used to show it to sightseers at threepence a head. The money thus earned was dropped into a missionary box, together with the contributions of his family; and when the annual missionary meeting came round, the box and the story were always produced to the great satisfaction of the audience, who never grew tired of hearing the good old man tell the tale of his interview with the Queen.—Exchange.

conditions. 'Farm and Household. REMEDY FOR FLIES ON CATTLE. Take coal tar two parts and coal oil and grease one part each and mix with a small amount of carbolic acid. Apply with a cloth by wetting the hair and horns of the animal with the liquid. In the applicator include feet and legs, and it will drive every fly away, and one application will last ten days or more in dry weather. Apply as often as necessary and your cows will be entirely secure from flies of all kinds. Any kind of old lard or grease can be used. Coal tar is the base of this remedy, and when too thick to spread well, use more coal oil, when too thin to adhere well, use more carbolic acid. Carbolic acid will cost about 50 or 60 cents in crystals by the pound, and every farmer should always keep it on hand, as, in its many uses, is indispensable. This remedy is equally effective as a lice exterminator on poultry, and is used simply by painting the sides of the henery and roosts and dropping boards with the liquid. For young chickens saturate a cloth and place in the bottom of a box, and place the mother and young chickens in the box for an hour or so. This recipe says, 'I'm proud of my boy Tom; he's never to forget me; and he's to take 'em to his children, if so be as God gives him a family. When the Queen says them words to me, I say to her, 'Your Majesty, mum,' I say, 'I haven't got nothing good about me but what comes from God,' and she say, 'No more haint none on us, Mr. Smith.' The Prince he jined in, and we had a rare good talk; 'twas for all the world just like a hand-meeting. Folks may say what they like, but it ain't no use 'em sayin' it to John Smith 'o' Diekleeborough. He know, and he say to all the world, Queen Victoria is a right good lady woman, and Prince Albert he's another—leastways—well, you know what I mane. 'It was gettin' nigh on to noon by this time, and at last the Queen she say to me, Mr. Smith,' she say, JAMMED FINGERS. Few people have escaped jammed fingers, and as the pain caused when the finger is jammed in a door is excruciating in the extreme for the first few minutes, it is well to know of some means of relief. The fingers should be plunged into water as hot as can be borne. This application of hot water causes the nail to expand and soften, and the blood pouring out beneath it has more room to flow; thus the pain is lessened. The finger should then be wrapped in a band and water poultice. A jammed finger should never be neglected, as it may lead to mortification of the bone if it has been badly crushed, and amputation of the finger must follow. Jammed toes are usually caused through the falling of heavy weights, and should be treated in the same way as a jammed finger.
