

Too late for last week. Dr. and Mrs. Sloan, who were rusticated at Montreal for a few weeks, have returned. Mrs. T. Gosman and Miss M. Taylor intend leaving on a trip to Bowmanville next week. Dame Rumour has it that several matrimonial alliances are soon to be contracted. We give the initials of a few: W. F., R. T., J. F. RUSTICATED.—Blyth Advocate has again come to life. It appeared last week in its old shape. It is a neat little paper and bids fair to promise of doing justice to Blyth. We hail its issue with delight. Harvesting is fairly finished in this locality. Crops were magnificent, the finest that has been for years, wheat ranging from 30 to 50 per acre, as was evinced by Dr. Sloan, who threshed and got 46 to the acre. Several have finished sowing their fall wheat. Rev. Mr. Parke, of Trinity church, is going to join the army of the benedicta this week. At least such is the rumour, and which is substantiated by the fact that a parsonage is being, or is about to be, erected for him. He evidently believes it is "not good for man to be alone." ACCIDENT.—An interesting sport, in which the young men partake, is soon hunting, and a deep bay of the hound, the scream of the raccoon, together with the report of guns, make the night hideous to some, and joyful to others. Sometimes 3 or 4 raccoons are killed in a night. H. McLelland, while out hunting raccoons, had the misfortune to shoot off part of two of his fingers. This will probably lay him up for some time. Colborne. The following sketch was crowded out last week: THE LATE PETER GREEN.—One of the familiar figures of the township, a pioneer and a patriarch, recently passed away to join the great majority. We refer to the late Peter Green, who on Saturday, the 9th inst. was laid to rest among his kindred. He died at the residence of his son-in-law, Samuel Morris, at the age of 86. He emigrated from Perthshire, Scotland, in 1833, and travelled with his family partly by boat and partly on foot from Quebec to Garbraid, and was the first man to turn a furrow in Colborne, at a point on Attrill's flats where the two oak trees facing Charles Morris's house (then the Dunlop home-stand) stand. The trees are now 61 years old, and what a change in the district since then! At the first meeting of the township council, the commissioners, as the township fathers were then called, appointed him the first constable in Colborne. The council meeting was held in the "Crown and Anchor" hotel, kept by John Morris, and situated where the barns of Jos. Morris now stand. Out of 43 ratepayers present on the 5th of Jan., 1836, only John Morris, J. Paterson and our respected reeve, Mr. Young, with Harry Brace, who resides in Oregon, are alive. Mr. Green was a strong, robust man, hardly knowing a dose of medicine during a long lifetime of 86 years, only taking one dose which was presented to him, by Dr. Dunlop when he first came to settle in Huron. One of his feats of strength was carrying a barrel of whiskey from where J. Morris' gate stands to the Crown and Anchor hotel. He also was one of those who went to the front in the troubles of 1837, with the company of the late sheriff Hyndeman, and was wounded by a bayonet thrust through the hand. His aged partner in life, who has three years his senior, still survives, after 65 years of wedded life. Out of nine of a family three sons survive—W. Green, of Casselton, Dak.; A. Green, Dalhousie; J. Green, Sheppardton. His daughters—Mrs. Johnston, St. Thomas; Mrs. Anderson, Brantford; and Mrs. S. Morris, Colborne. There are also 50 grand children and 84 great grand children living in Ontario and Dakota. An Untrusting Speaker. The Hamilton Times says:—"Mr. T. J. Bell, editor of the Dundas Standard, and an enthusiastic Anti-Scott Act orator, has been slandering some Hamilton clergymen. Mr. Bell has been starting through the County of Bruce as leading man at the Anti meetings, and it is asserted that at these meetings he used the names of several of the ministers of this city in support of his cause, representing them as being opposed to the passage of the Act in this city and declaring that they were members of the Anti-Scott Act Central Committee. No doubt Mr. Bell thought his statements would pass uncontradicted in the backwoods townships, else he would not have made them. Among those whom Mr. Bell thought fit to thus misrepresent were Rev. Thomas Goldsmith, (formerly of Seaford), and in this week's Walkerton Telescope a letter appears from the reverend gentleman emphatically giving the lie to Mr. Bell's statements, and expressing astonishment "at the cool recitiveness in which as report of Mr. Bell's address abounds." Rev. Mr. Laidlaw, it seems, has also been after the preparator with a forked stick."
