A dozen strapping Canadian lads of the Queen's Own Rifles in a great pormitory at the Duke of York's School in Chelsea gave me their in ressions of London with the franknes, and engaging charm of youth (writes a Daily News representative).

"I've been in New York and Chicago," said one, "but London is a lot finer. I should like to live in London and work in Toronto, where most of us come from, at the same time. You see, it's much more exciting here, but wages are better at home. Most of us are elerks, and we easily make £3 or £4 week in your money.

"But things are cheaper here," put in one of his comrades. "Why, it costs tenpence to get your hair cut in Mon-

"You know," said another, a handsome lad of eighteen, "some things surprised us very much here. We went into a bar and found women serving drinks. That is not allowed in Canada. There seems to be saloons everywhere in London; now, in Toronto, with 400,000 inhabitants, there are only 110 bars, and they are not allowed unless they are attached to proper hotels. Then we saw women drinking in saloons"-and he spoke with utter disgust. "That is not allowed in Canada. Our rule is no women in saloons. aren't allowed to go until we are 21, and we can't buy cigarettes until we're eighteen."

But you mustn't think we're runapologetically. "We're having a fine time here."

"I didn't quite like the theatre we went to last night," said candid eighreen. "Dancers dressed as they were in the ballet we saw would not be allowed in Toronto."

Look Out For The Advertiser's New Story

The opening chapter will appear on this page Saturday, Oct. 1.

The title of the new story is "THE SON OF THE IMMORTALS."

The author of the new story is Louis Tracy, who wrote "The Wings of the Morning," "The King of Diamonds" and other popular stories. A new Tracy story is an event in the publishing world, and the newspaper that gets it is fortunate.

Watch for the first instalment in The Advertiser on Saturday.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

If you have a black silk petticoat that has lost its luster and stiffness, it can be greatly freshened by being immersed in water and powdered alum, used in the proportion of two tablespoonfuls of the alum to a quart of water. Shake the silk until it is almost dry, then iron it on the wrong side with a hot iron. If brown paper is put over the silk before it is ironed it will not be shiny.

When sewing carpets, felt or any hard material, if the point of the needle is pricked into a piece of beeswax or wax candle, it will penetrate the material far more easily.

When a Man Marries

Copyrighted, 1910, Bobbs-Merrill Co. The men spent most of the morning together in the den, with the door shut. Now and then one of them would tiptoe upstairs, ask the nurse how her patient was doing, and creak down again. Just before noon they all went to the roof and examined again the place where he had been found. I know, for I was in the upper hall, outside the studio. I stayed there almost all day, and after a while the nurse let me bring her things as she needed them. "Don't cry too long, Kit; I can only point: stand a certain amount."

And just then the nurse opened the door to the studio, and with Max's arms still around me, I raised my head and

She had on a fetching pale blue dressing-gown, and one braid of her yellow hair was pulled carelessly over her shoulder. When she saw me on my knees beside the bed (oh, yes. I forgot to say that, quite unconsciously, I had slid into that position), she stopped short, just inside the door, and put her hand to her throat. She stood for quite a perceptible time looking at us, and I tried to rise. But Tom shamelessly put his arm around my shoulders and held me beside him. inflammation, ulceration, local weaknesses, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life. It costs but little to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and. as Mrs. Barclaysays, it is "worth mountains of gold" to suffering women.

by killing the germs. There is one sure remedy that will cure these misfortunes and aid you to remain young.

Parisian Sage stops falling hair-it prevents the hair from fading.

It is the best beautifier for ladles' hair, as it makes harsh, lustreless hair
