NEW FAIR BUILDING WILL HAVE 313 BOOTHS

Ninety-Five Per Cent of Total Space Has Already Been Allotted.

The new manufacturers' building in the grounds of the Western Fair has 313 booths for the exhibition of manufactured products. Ninety-five per cent of them have been let, and many of the new exhibitors in the Western are showing products that are quite strangers to the fair. The automobile section is the largest in the history of the fair. For the first time the pure food exhibits are being shown in ideal surroundings where they can be fully appreciated. The heavy articles are on the ground floor, which has 185 booths, and the top floor houses the lighter products in 128 stands. The difference in the number of booths in the first and second floors is accounted for by the fact that there are large spaces in the first floor which are necessary in such a building to let the light down to the exhibits. The building is 291 feet long by 128 feet in width, and looks even more inside.

Hon. Mr. Ferguson stated this morning that the federal and provincial governments would wait on him tomorrow and their side of the controversy would be discussed. Mr. Ferguson is emphatic that action will be taken to clear up the situation, even if it borders on being drastic.

LARKIN'S ABILITY AS COMMISSIONER BRINGS RESULTS

Canada's Representative in the British Capital Praised For Businesslike Methods.

DISLIKES PUBLICITY

By HENRY SOMERVILLE.
Special to The Advertiser.
London, Aug. 13.—It is a salutary gift for a man to be able to see himself as others see him, and it is also somewhat interesting to know how he is seen. Mr. Peter C. Larkin is not given to writing or talking autobiography, but speaking just after his appointment as high commissioner for London he described himself, in the language of Mark Antony:

"I am no orator.
But as you know me all, a plain blunt man.
That do love my friend."
Only a few weeks ago, speaking at a dinner in London, Mr. Larkin remarked rather ruefully, that he had been pitted into an onerous public position at a time of life when he might have reasonably expected to be able to take things easily. The high commissioner was not out of respect for the wishes of the late Sir Wilfrid Laurier who had long marked out Peter C. Larkin as the Canadian to stand for Canada in the metropolis of the Empire.

Presumably it was towards the speech-making and that art called "publicity" which fell to the lot of a high commissioner that Mr. Larkin felt himself unattracted. With characteristic directness he declared his confidence in his ability to handle the administrative work of the office, for as he said himself, he had had 35 years' experience in the organization of men and things.

Secured Real Premises.
It has been made very apparent in London that Canada is represented by high commissioner who is by temperament and training a business man and not a politician. If Mr. Larkin's contributions to the oratory of imperialism have not been voluminous he has built up a reputation as a man who gets things done. One of the things he set himself to do from the very first has only just been brought to a successful conclusion: the acquisition of a worthy building for the Dominion headquarters in London. The old office at No. 19 Victoria street had long been too small and the unimpressiveness of "his headquarters" had been painfully Canadian eyes with the palatial premises that other Dominions have secured.

The high commissioner's search for a habit was a long one. A number of well-known buildings were offered, but Mr. Larkin was hard to please. He had to be satisfied not only with the building and its position, but the price. Vendors who thought that a government buyer could be coaxed into paying a fancy price found that they were up against a very hard bargainer in Mr. Larkin. One deal, in which a famous bank was the owner of the property, was nearly put through. Every paper in London announced it, and some added the information that the price was a million pounds. He had to be satisfied not only with the building and its position, but the price. Vendors who thought that a government buyer could be coaxed into paying a fancy price found that they were up against a very hard bargainer in Mr. Larkin. One deal, in which a famous bank was the owner of the property, was nearly put through. Every paper in London announced it, and some added the information that the price was a million pounds.

Aided to Lift Embargo.
The removal of the British embargo on Canadian cattle has been a feature of Mr. Larkin's high commissioner's mission. Perhaps there is much difference between a good business man and a good diplomatist. Anyhow, Mr. Larkin in the embargo negotiations had the extremely happy knack of getting the best of both sides. He was asked by the important share of others in the affair, it may be said that the result attests the success of Mr. Larkin. British policy has not been asked for things unless he thinks he is reasonably entitled to them, but if he does ask he will not be cowed by evasive answers, but will get a plain yes or no.

During the controversies that have marked the trail of the British Empire Exhibition, interested parties made great efforts to get Dominion high commissioners on their side, and some Dominion representatives did engage in wordy warfare and newspaper correspondence. Mr. Larkin abstained from all public quarrelling. He made it clear to the responsible authorities that Canada would only help to finance the exhibition if it kept faithfully to its original purpose of demonstrating the resources of the British Empire. But he refused to endorse carping criticisms, such as that the timber used for scaffolding was not empire timber. "Contractors," he said, "have used that for a long time and over again," he said to a reporter. "Canada is too big to insist that contractors must purchase empire timber for temporary scaffolding. This is a small point, but a terrible amount of fuss was being made about small points, and the Duke of Devonshire, who was trying to pour oil on the troubled waters at the time, was grateful that the representative of the largest Dominion concerned used his influence to sweep petty details out of the path to a broad settlement."

Settle Exchange Dispute.
No single affair has taken up more of the high commissioner's time than the settlement of the exchange dis-

VISITOR THROWS U. S. WILL APPROVE OF RECIPROCITY

After Next Presidential Election Best Time To Try, Says Archie Kaines.

IF DEMOCRATS WIN

The most auspicious time for the Liberal government to negotiate for complete trade reciprocity with the United States will come after the American presidential election, Archie Kaines, former Londoner, and now one of the foremost financial executives in the United States, declared in an interview today.

Mr. Kaines lived here 40 years ago, returning last week to look up old acquaintances. He is a Democrat and looks confidently to the future in the country of his adoption next election.

The industrial depression with which Canadian industry is at present confronted would not be in existence, Mr. Kaines thinks, if free trade was in operation between the two countries. In 1911, when Sir Wilfrid Laurier sought a reciprocal commercial pact with the United States, Canada lost a wonderful chance by rejecting reciprocity. But Mr. Kaines believes the prospective American Democratic government will give this country another opportunity to break down the trade barriers between the two nations. If reciprocity comes about, he is confident Canada will experience an unparalleled measure of prosperity.

Heads Big Bank.
Archie Kaines is president of the Federal International Banking Company, one of the largest financial institutions of the Southern States. His business is mostly in connection with cotton exchange, and the bank's intimacy with Europe in this regard has given Mr. Kaines a close knowledge of the economic situation in Great Britain and other European countries.

He believes conditions in Europe will become even darker in the next two months. After that, however, the dawn following the storm will set in and many unfortunate situations will be relieved. For Canada, however, the great necessity for reciprocal trade relations with the United States.

"I am a Conservative, always have been," Mr. Kaines said, "but I believe the national policy as founded by Sir John A. Macdonald is ruinous under present conditions. The United States has been extraordinarily prosperous for 15 years. Canada could enjoy equally good times if she would abandon her high protective trade policy."

Well Known Here.
When a boy, Mr. Kaines went to the Union School, under "Nick" Wilson, along with Thomas E. Wilson, Chicago captain of industry, and other noted persons. He worked in the Bank of Commerce here when that institution was founded by the Dominion Bank. He has traveled all over the world in a banking capacity, and in 1914 became president of the great southern financial house after having been founder and chief of the Foreign Bank of New York.

Mr. Kaines is a large, genial man, seemingly far away from the common conception of the shrewd metropolitan banker. He and Mrs. Kaines are staying at the Marlborough Club, plan to leave for New Orleans, their home, in a short time.

SAYS OMISSIONS IN PENSION BILL ARE NOT SERIOUS

Hon. H. S. Beland Advises G.W.V.A. Interest of Veterans Will Be Cared For.

APPOINTS BOARD

Canadian Press Despatch.
Ottawa, Aug. 13.—Hon. H. S. Beland, minister of soldiers' civil re-establishment, made a statement this morning in relation to the petition sent to the government by the G. W. V. A. in regard to the dropping of certain sections from the pension and re-establishment legislation at the last session of parliament.

"The sections were omitted," said Dr. Beland, "and I do not know how it occurred. But the omissions are not serious."

"One section omitted," he went on, "gave the appellant the right to access to the files in his case. It is quite within the power of the minister to allow access to the files without an act of parliament."

"And it will be your policy to grant such access?" Dr. Beland was asked. "Yes," he replied, "it will be our policy to grant it."

"The other section omitted," he continued, "provided that the successful appellant should have the expenses of his appeal paid. Under the act as it stands tonight, the appellant has the right to have his expenses paid under such conditions as are set by the governor-in-council. As soon as the board of appeal is appointed and is functioning, we shall pass an order-in-council to provide for leading at the end of the first lap in the latter event."
